EXTRA SESSION MAY BE CALLED ON RELIEF BILL

Resume Battle in Capital Today.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 4.—[Special.]—A prediction that President Hoover will call a special relief session of congress if it adjourns without passing a relief bill acceptable to him was made by Representative Bertrand H. Snell [Rep., N. Y.], minority leader of the house, following a dinner conference at the White House.

In a short statement issued on the eve of the opening of the final stage of the White House-congressional battle over the Wagner-Garner relief bill, the stocky red faced administration leader asserted that President Hoover was determined to have a relief bill which would aid in relieving distress and unemployment. Although not stating definitely that Mr. Hoover would veto the compromise Wagner-Garner bill due to be perfected tomorrow by the senate and house conferees, Mr. Snell hinted strongly that such a step was being considered.

Early Call Possible.

"Let me tell you something," he said to newspaper men gathered to ask him about his week-end conference with the President culminating in a fried chicken dinner tonight, "if the President should veto the relief bill and congress adjourns without any relief legislation the President will call us back within twenty-four hours, in my judgment. He will not let us leave here without enacting an acceptable relief bill."

The Snell bombshell was tossed into the ranks of the Democratic supporters of the Wagner-Garner relief bill at a time when administration leaders were predicting that the President would veto the bill if passed as now written and Democratic spokesmen were stating just as definitely that if the President vetoed the measure there would be no relief at this session.

Showdown Due Today.

The crisis in the battle between the White House and congress over the major provisions of the compromise bill is due tomorrow when the senate and house conferees meet at 9:30 to study the first draft of the compromise measure and to make such final changes as are deemed advisable. Indications tonight following the Hoover-Snell conference were that President Hoover will attack the bill as now written some time tomorrow and urge that it be so revised that features objectionable to him be removed.

According to administration leaders President Hoover is opposed to the sections of the bill which provide for new federal public works and which stipulate that two-thirds of the 300 million dollars supplied for federal relief should be apportioned among the states on a basis of population rather than need. As it now stands the bill carries one billion 500 millions for loans through the Reconstruction Finance corporation to states, municipalities, and other public bodies, for the construction of so-called self-liquidating projects of a nonfederal nature, 307 millions for public works, and 300 millions for relief loans direct to the states.

Disagree Over Veto.

For several days controversy has raged over whether President Hoover will veto the bill.

Democratic leaders are certain he will not. Senator Watson said tonight that he was certain the President will veto the bill if it is not changed. Senator Robert F. Wagner [Dem., N. Y.] scoffed at the idea of a presidential veto, saying that "I just can't believe it." Watson and Wagner both have talked the bill over with President Hoover within the last few days. Senator Charles L. McNary [Rep., Ore.], assistant Republican leader, saw the President Saturday. He has told his friends that President Hoover will veto the bill if it does not suit him and within 24 hours shoot a substitute bill back to congress which will be passed.

30,000 Belgian Jobless Protest Reduction in Dole

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

BRUSSELS, July 4.—Claiming that they represented the 300,000 unemployed in all Belgium, 30,000 men marched in Brussels today in protest against a decrease in the unemployment dole and the proposed duty on imported wheat. The demonstrators were mostly youths in their twenties and were respectably dressed and apparently well fed.

T. J. Crowe Robbed of His Diamond Star

T. J. CROWE.

Timothy J. Crowe, former president of the Sanitary district, no longer has that ornate diamond studded gold star of office, the presentation of which was one of the opening incidents of the "whoopee" era which resulted in Crowe's conviction and sentence to five years' imprisonment three months ago on charges of conspiracy.

The star, with other jewelry valued at more than $13,000, was taken by burglars who ransacked the Crowe home at 5946 Washington boulevard a week ago, it was learned yesterday. The burglary was kept secret during the preliminary investigation by police.

Basket of Liquor Taken.

The burglars rejected a fur coat valued at $2,000, some other furs and clothing, and a number of small pieces of jewelry. One item which they did not reject, however, was meticulously described in the police report of the loot as follows:

"Bronze basket, used for Christmas fruits and candies, but now filled with choice assorted liquors, mostly from Havana."

Some of the more expensive items of jewelry included in the loot, with their value, were: Wrist watch, set with 198 diamonds, $1,450; diamond pendant $900; two diamond rings, $1,875 and $2,450; chain, set with 9 carat diamond [imperfect], $1,450; diamond brooch, $950; pearl and diamond chain, $385; diamond and emerald ring, $370; scarf pin, $750; 2 combination cigar lighters and watches, $150 each.

Entire House in Disorder.

The Crowe family went to their summer home a week ago Saturday, and discovered the burglary when they returned home last Monday. The entire house was in disorder, the thieves having dumped the contents of drawers on the floor in their search for loot. Mrs. Crowe, who reported the robbery to police, told them that the jewelry was formerly insured against theft, but that the insurance ran out in February and had not been renewed, through an oversight.

3 KILLED, 20 INJURED AS TORNADO WRECKS A TOWN IN KANSAS

Hanover, Kas., July 4.—(AP)—At least three persons were killed and more than 20 injured in a tornado which struck Washington, Kas., late today during a Fourth of July celebration.

Two new schoolhouses, the courthouse, the Burlington station, and 50 houses were razed by the wind.

All communication lines were destroyed by the tornado and persons who were able to get out of the town sent a call for ambulances, doctors, and nurses.

The tornado struck at 5:15 p. m., accompanied by a downpour which measured an inch and a half in a few minutes.

Passenger trains from Wymore, Neb., to Concordia were forced to return to Hanover because of the debris scattered over the tracks.

Washington has a population of 2,400.

Twister Kills Farmer's Wife.

Hubbell, Neb., July 4.—(AP)—Mrs. F. E. Slagle, 50, was killed and her husband and two sons were injured seriously late today when a tornado struck their farm home five miles north of here. The storm also struck five other farms in the vicinity.

The Slagles saw the storm approaching and ran for an outdoor storm cellar. Just as they reached the door the tornado picked them up and carried them across a road, dropping them side by side.

TOMORROW YOU WILL PAY 3 CENT LETTER POSTAGE

Coolidge's 60th Birthday; Nurses Hay Fever Attack

Plymouth, Vt., July 4.—(AP)—Calvin Coolidge spent his sixtieth birthday in his homestead today nursing an attack of hay fever and watching a steady rain beat against the window panes. The former President's son, John, and his wife were week-end guests. There were no bursting firecrackers or other appurtenances of Independence day to punctuate the silence of the green hills, but a messenger boy made several trips with telegrams and letters of congratulations.

Mattern and Griffin Start World Flight

New York, July 5 [Tuesday].—(AP)—Jimmie Mattern, blond young birdman from Fort Worth, Tex., and Bennett Griffin of Oklahoma City, former wartime airman, took off at 4:01 a. m. [Chicago daylight time] today for an attempt at the round the world flight record.

Setting Harbor Grace, N. F., as their first objective, they hoped to spin around the globe in six days, thereby smashing the record of 8 days, 15 hours, 51 minutes set by Harold Gatty and Wiley Post in the plane Winnie Mae.

It was raining over Nova Scotia, they were advised, but weather conditions otherwise were good.

Their projected route will trail the Winnie Mae across the Atlantic to Ireland, over Europe to Siberia, across Asia to the Pacific and, homeward via the North Pacific and Alaska.

HUNGER STALKS IN AUSTRALIA AS DEFICITS MOUNT

Capital Driven Out by State Spending.

Here is the third of a series of articles by Mr. Kinsley, who was sent by The Tribune to get an American observer's viewpoint of conditions in Australia. Another article will appear tomorrow.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BRISBANE, Australia, June 18.—[By Mail.]—Queensland, largest of the six states in the flag of the southern cross, a vast domain of meadow and desert, gray mountain bush and golden beaches, in which the British isles might be comfortably tucked away, presents a challenge and a temptation to the world.

With 3,000 miles of coast line open to the oriental Pacific, the state has built a wall around its empty acres—a wall of tariff, embargos and immigration laws, a wall of self-contained white Australia against the brown and black millions at its doors, against its white overseas competitors even within the empire.

Able to Support Millions.

More than half of its 670,000 square miles lies within the tropical zone. It might support many millions. The whole state has less than 2,000,000 population, mostly gathered in seacoast towns. At its gate is Thursday island, which it governs as a sort of melting pot of the races, and a string of smaller islands inhabited chiefly by blacks, each governed by a white "teacher" or superintendent. Across the coral sea is New Guinea, governed by an Australian mandate. A little further along come the southern Philippines, Java, India, China, and Japan. Where given a chance, as in the Fiji islands, the East Indians flock by the thousands and change the face of the country. Suva is largely an Indian city now.

Queensland's only defense against a brown invasion of the future is the British navy. That is why, with New Zealand, it insists upon completion of the Singapore naval base, only a few days sailing away. The national defense system is largely voluntary and potential, and its navy is part of the British fleet.

Finds Move Against King.

With this situation to face it seems strange to find in Queensland a lot of talk about "loyalists" and "disloyalists," and an actual movement within the Labor party against British imperialism and any closer connection with king and parliament in London.

At the same time, this group is pacifist or anti-militarist in its home policy. Its sympathies are with the league of nations and the hope of disarmament. Its main objective, however, is the socialization of production, industry and exchange, a program in which it is allied with labor groups in other states.

There is trouble behind the wall now. This little group of whites who have taken this empire and who have been forcing a hothouse sort of civilization, impatient of economic laws, their heads buried in their golden sands, have found that the dream of humanity's happiness has not come any nearer, that the government cannot do all things for them, that they must turn back and somehow, within themselves, find a new courage to go on.

People Hungry and Disheartened.

In Queensland, with its millions of acres of unoccupied acres, people are hungry and cold and disheartened, as in the great centers of life. Thousands of men, many of them eager young fellows just out of school, are tramping the dusty bush roads from town to town on a hopeless search for work, kept moving by the system of weekly government ration tickets. Few new apprentices are being employed as 30 per cent of the qualified workers are out of employment. A tax of six pence on the pound on those who are working keeps the others from starvation, but that is about all. Food tickets, based on the number in each family, are issued instead of a cash dole.

The government, father of all good and ill, is blamed for all this. The government's financial and industrial policy is supposed to settle the standards of living for all. It has found, however, that the government cannot force capital into unproductive channels, and when loan markets are closed by mounting deficits that it has an appalling job ahead of it. The government that seeks to retrench and cut the cloth of wages to fit commerce is immediately unpopular. The road back is hard to take, and the

MRS. ROBERT S. McCORMICK DIES IN FRANCE

Mrs. Katharine Medill McCormick, mother of Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, died last night in Versailles, France, after a heart attack.

Her death took place in the Hotel Trianon Palace shortly after midnight. She was attended by Dr. Edmund L. Gross, chief of staff of the American hospital of Paris.

Mrs. McCormick was the widow of Robert S. McCormick, who was American ambassador to Austria, Russia and France, and was a daughter of Joseph Medill, editor of THE TRIBUNE from 1855 until his death in 1899.

Knew Lincoln and Grant.

Mrs. McCormick was born July 11, 1853, and her girlhood was spent in associations that were to become historic. She frequently met Abraham Lincoln, who visited often at the Medill home. She knew the family of President Grant and was a guest at the White House frequently. In her later life she was fond of relating anecdotes of Grant and Lincoln.

She was married in 1876 and in 1889 Mr. McCormick was appointed first secretary of the American legation in London and served for three years there under Minister Robert T. Lincoln. He was transferred in 1892 to be official representative in the British capital of the Chicago World's Fair.

First Ambassador to Austria.

For several years after the fair Mr. and Mrs. McCormick resided in Chicago. They returned to a diplomatic career in 1901, when President McKinley made Mr. McCormick minister to Austria to succeed Addison C. Harris. The following year the rank of the American representative in Vienna was raised and Mr. McCormick became the first ambassador to Austria.

In 1903 Mr. McCormick was transferred as ambassador to Russia. He was instrumental in lifting the censorship on Russian news during the war with Japan.

Mr. McCormick was made ambassador to France in 1905. He and Mrs. McCormick remained in Paris until 1907, when Mr. McCormick's ill health compelled him to withdraw from his diplomatic career. Mrs. McCormick, who spoke French and German fluently, always maintained a deep interest in foreign affairs.

Spends Summers Abroad.

The death of Mr. McCormick occurred in 1919. Since then Mrs. McCormick has traveled extensively. It was her custom to spend nearly every summer abroad.

She is survived by her son, Col. McCormick, and her sister, Mrs. Robert W. Patterson. There are also a grandson, John Medill McCormick, and two granddaughters, Katrina and Ruth McCormick, the children of the late Senator Medill McCormick. Senator McCormick died in 1925.

Arrangements were being made last night to hold a brief funeral service in the American chapel in Paris. There will be a service and burial, at a time to be announced later, in Chicago.

ROMANCE LIVES THIRTY YEARS TO BRING WEDDING

Boston, Mass., July 4.—[Special.]—A romance dating back thirty years resulted in the marriage here today of Mrs. Eliza Swinton Ryder, 50, who arrived from Liverpool on the Cunarder Laconia, and Walter M. Cawthron, 51, of 76 Robbins street, Providence.

They were sweethearts in England years ago but drifted apart, Cawthron coming to this country. Both married, Mrs. Ryder's husband dying three years ago, and Mr. Cawthron's wife passing in 1930.

Their courtship was renewed by mail and a week ago Mrs. Ryder left her home in Bradford, England, to come here.

Robin Raising a Family in Locomotive Turntable

Emporia, Kas., July 4.—(AP)—The hiss and rumble of huge locomotives which are guided onto a big turntable at the Santa Fe roundhouse here is being carefully reduced to a minimum. A mother robin has selected the turntable as a likely spot to rear a family and has deposited three blue eggs in a tidy nest.

55 ARE INJURED BY FIREWORKS IN CHICAGO AREA

Casualties Here 5 Times Last Year's.

The Celebration

Nation's toll on Fourth is 225 dead. Automobiles account for the most fatalities, with drownings second and fireworks third. Details on page 2.

Chicago's largest crowd, 60,000, sees military tournament in Soldiers' field. The spectacle will be repeated tonight. Details on page 3.

Fifty-five persons were injured by fireworks or guns in Chicago and suburbs yesterday. This casualty list, the largest for July 4 in the metropolitan area for years, marked a sharp setback to the sane Fourth movement inaugurated two decades ago. Almost every large hospital in the area inoculated injured celebrants against tetanus.

Yesterday's casualty toll was exactly five times as large as that of July 4 last year, when eleven persons were hurt. Of yesterday's victims, fifty were burned or wounded by fireworks. Three were struck by bullets and two were hurt by blank cartridges.

Several Seriously Injured.

Up to midnight last night no deaths were recorded, although several of the victims suffered serious injuries. Prompt measures in treating sufferers against tetanus, a frequent result of fireworks wounds, are expected by physicians to prevent fatalities this year, as last.

Most of those hurt yesterday and last night were boys. The majority were burned by firecrackers which exploded in their hands. A youth and a man were burned by cannon crackers thrown near them.

One woman, Mrs. Rose Furlong, 53 years old, of 4107 Washington boulevard, was struck in the face by a blazing powder ball while watching the annual fireworks display of Oak Park in the village's high school stadium. She was taken to the Oak Park hospital.

Arthur Tromsdos, 33 years old, of 644 York place, a chauffeur, was standing in front of 2900 Broadway when a firecracker was flung from a passing sedan. The explosion tore a hole in his shoe and severely burned his right foot.

Boy May Lose Sight of Eye.

One of the more seriously hurt was Walter Barlow, 13 years old, of 7050 Princeton avenue. He may lose the sight of his left eye as the result of the explosion of a firecracker in his face. The cracker was thrown by another boy.

John Leicar, 40 years old, of 1527 South Gunderson avenue, Berwyn, lost a finger on his left hand because of a firecracker explosion.

A toy cannon sent Thomas Preslick, 8 years old, of 3133 West 53d place, to a hospital for treatment for burns on the face. Billy Truske, 7, of North Mango avenue was burned by a torpedo. Lorraine Dollmar, 10, of 11042 Union avenue suffered an injury to her left eye because of a torpedo explosion. The right thumb of Anthony Zaransky, 37, of 1113 East 55th street was blown off by a firecracker.

Joseph Bonde, 27 years old, 2931 Fulton street, lost the thumb and index finger of his left hand when a dynamite cap exploded in his hand.

Five Injured by Guns.

Those injured by guns were Mrs. Mary Yaker, 25 years old, 4606 South Paulina street; Harold Hein, 12, of 1512 West 51st street; Gwendolyn Starks, 7, of 6057 South Ada street; Arthur Durkin, 18, of 3040 Arthington street, and Joseph Deconi, 16 years old, 3840 Huron street. Mrs. Yaker was struck in the left knee by a stray bullet. A stray bullet also struck Gwendolyn Starks in the knee. Deconi was wounded in the left leg by the accidental discharge of a pistol held by a companion. The Hein boy and young Durkin were injured by blank cartridges.

William Hill, 12 years old, 2423 Greenleaf avenue, fell from a roof of his uncle's barn at Woodstock while lighting firecrackers and was taken to the Rogers Park hospital suffering from a skull fracture. Lee True, 23 years old, 4054 North Hermitage avenue, was struck by an automobile when he ran into the street to retrieve a firecracker that had failed to explode in front of 2000 Lincoln Park West.

As a whole, police said, Chicago was rather quiet so far as fireworks explosions were concerned. Firecrackers were abundantly in evidence, however, despite the restrictions on their sale and use here and in the suburbs. County roadside stands supplied the needs, but business, it was said, was not up to the standard of other years.

Warning by Dr. Bundesen.

The reason for the reporting of so many casualties was explained by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, last night.

"The public is better educated today against the perils of lockjaw," he said. "In other years all the firecracker burns were not reported. This year, apparently, the slightest injury case was taken to a hospital for anti-tetanus treatment, accounting probably for the increase.

"Powder wounds are an especially dangerous source of infection by tetanus. Even if the powder does not burn the skin the infection is easily started if the explosion blows small stones or bits of dirt beneath the skin. There is no way of telling whether such a wound is infected by tetanus, and the application of antiseptics, or even cauterization, will not stop such an infection. The use of the anti-tetanic serum is the only sure remedy. The serum should be used at once, or within 24 hours."

Dr. Bundesen said that although the board of health has virtually no funds, he will insure treatment for any one even though the patient may be unable to pay the cost of the treatment. He said he had received 22 calls yesterday from mothers whose children had been hurt by firecrackers. As health administrator of the city over six previous July Fourths, the largest number of such calls received by him previously was three or four, he said.

Fireworks Seller Arersted.

Joseph Tesarik, 5843 West 16th street, Cicero, was arrested by police of the suburb for selling fireworks in his delicatessen in violation of the town ordinance.

Cool weather did not interfere with the formal celebrations which most of the suburban towns had planned. The Great Lakes Naval Training station band marched in the parade in Evanston, followed by four other bands. The American Legion conducted a band contest, with nine entries, in Dyche stadium.

Oak Park had a parade in the morning and the annual fireworks display last night in the high school stadium. Forest Park, Riverside, Maywood, Cicero, Berwyn, and other western suburbs had parades and other festivities. In Lyons 1,200 school children marched and later attended a carnival.

DEATH TOTAL PASSES 200

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The nation today counted 225 dead as the price of its three day Independence anniversary celebration.

Fireworks and explosives took their annual toll with nine deaths and hundreds of burns and injuries, some serious. Dynamite caps used as noise makers accounted for seven of the ten fatalities.

Automobiles took a larger number of lives than any other single cause, with drownings ranking second. There were 111 persons killed in auto crashes, 31 drownings, 10 deaths caused by fireworks, and 24 from other causes.

Six of the deaths from explosives occurred in Butte, Mont., when a group of youths, all under 20, were killed by the explosion of a pile of dynamite caps which they had been detonating one by one. The source of the caps or the cause of the explosion were not learned.

Couple Marks 61st Wedding Date on Fourth of July

Independence day yesterday marked the 61st anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gustafson, 855 East 76th street. They were married in Hobart, Ind., in 1871. The couple spent the day receiving the congratulations of friends and relatives at their home. Mr. Gustafson is 85 years old, and Mrs. Gustafson is 80. He came to Chicago 65 years ago. His first job, that of carpenter's helper, was obtained through a TRIBUNE want ad. Mr. Gustafson retired from business several years ago.

Portuguese Finance Chief Forms New Government

LISBON, Portugal, July 4.—(AP)—Oliveira de Salazar, finance minister for the last two years, succeeded today in forming a new Portuguese cabinet to succeed the government of Gen. Domingos Oliveira, which resigned last month after two years in office.

AUTOS BRING 500,000 HOME FROM OUTINGS

Roads Crowded, but Wide Pavements Help.

BY HAL FOUST.

Approximately 150,000 automobiles entered Chicago late yesterday afternoon and last night carrying nearly a half million persons returning from one, two or three days' outing in the country or from visits with friends or relatives over the holiday week-end.

The picnickers and vacationists came from the lakes and woods of northern Michigan and Wisconsin, from the resorts of Indiana and the state parks of Illinois. Improved highways and automobiles have extended Chicago's playground for a radius of at least 350 miles.

Fifty miles or so from Chicago, in almost all directions, the pavement became congested. The occasional slow and inconsiderate driver blocked progress for those in a hurry to get home.

Learn to Use Wide Roads.

A little closer to the city, the recently widened radial routes picked up the bulk of the traffic, handling the crowds expeditiously and with comparative safety and comfort. On the forty foot rural roads, motorists are learning to stay in the outer lanes except when passing. However, some educational efforts by motorcycle police could improve the movement of vehicles on the open highways.

Just outside the city, there were blockades at intersections of busy routes. The state highway department has built a few grade separations and is constructing a few others, but their sites have been determined more by the ease in obtaining rights of way than by the needs of traffic.

On Roosevelt road, for example, little progress has been made in separating the grades at the crowded and dangerous intersection with Mannheim road. On Roosevelt road at Glen Ellyn, a two level crossing is under construction for a new north and south highway where the traffic will never be heavy because the new road will not tap centers of population.

Meet Trouble in City.

Inside Chicago, the returning motorists bumped over worn out pavements, crowded onto narrow boulevards and car line streets and had their right feet on brake pedals much of the time for stop lights, cross streets and pedestrians. The state highway department, receiving $20,000,000 a year from Chicago motorists, has not laid a block of pavement in this city.

Drivers were responsible as well as road builders for many of the annoyances in the country and in the city. In the country, there were graveled side roads with scenic attractions where the slow driver could have idled without annoyance to those anxious to get some place. In the city, bad manners at the wheel decreased the efficiency of the existing inadequate pavements and created avoidable hazards.

On Washington boulevard, for example, the faster drivers zigzagged with their rear fenders a constant threat to the front fenders of those they were passing. Most of the slow drivers hugged the center line, forcing others to make the illegal pass in the lane next to the curb.

Cut Corners in Park.

Other slow drivers blocked all from passing except by driving to the left of the center of the street, darting in and out in front of oncoming traffic. On curves in Garfield park many cut the corners, swinging from one side to the other, without regard for cars immediately behind them.

On the inner drives in Lincoln park this zigzagging has been reduced by recent painting of traffic lanes on the pavement, but the paint job is not complete and the police don't enforce respect for the lane markers. In other parts of the city there is almost no lane marking on the pavements and neither the police nor the motoring public try to keep traffic in an orderliness that would increase average speeds and reduce risks.

AUTO ACCIDENTS CLAIM 11 LIVES DURING HOLIDAY

Five Die of Injuries in Cook County.

Eleven residents of the Chicago metropolitan area died of injuries suffered in automobile accidents over the holiday. Five of the fatalities occurred in Cook county, raising the toll for the year to 561. The county victims:

Miss Katherine Ardanas, 30 years old, a nurse at the Silver Cross hospital, Joliet. Killed early this morning when the car in which she was riding with David Aupoll, 1518 Wentworth avenue, Chicago Heights, was forced off the Lincoln highway at Cicero avenue by a truck carrying colored baseball players to Chicago after a game at Kankakee. Robert Aulston, colored, 5102 South State street, driver of the truck, was held.

Miss Lucille Rubeo, 28 years old, of 1702 North Washtenaw avenue. Died in St. Mary's hospital of injuries suffered on Sunday in a collision of two automobiles at Noble street and Augusta boulevard.

Joseph Moore, 22 years old, of 4842 North Paulina street. Killed when he was jolted off a motorcycle as it collided with an automobile at St. Charles and Mannheim roads, Bellwood. William Hayes, 2217 Lawrence avenue, operator of the motorcycle, and Quinton Rise of Naperville, driver of the auto, escaped injury.

Alexander Stack, 38 years old, 1634 West 87th street. Killed when he drove his automobile against a Rock Island railroad engine at Ashland avenue and 89th street.

An unidentified man, about 42 years old. Killed at 18th street and the outer drive by an automobile driven by Stanley Michels, 4145 Drexel boulevard. Michels was held.

Two Chicagoans lost their lives in Wisconsin, two in downstate Illinois, and one in Ohio. A Harvey resident was killed in Indiana.

The Wisconsin accidents claimed the lives of Bruce Anderson, 18 years old, son of Policeman Clarence Anderson, and Joseph Kowalski, 26 years old. Their addresses were not learned. Anderson died at Janesville of injuries suffered Sunday when the automobile in which he was riding with his sister, Irene, his mother, and Herman Ness of Aurora, left the road. Kowalski's car collided with another auto near Swamico.

The two who died downstate were Frank Seamon, 37 years old, 3440 Emerald avenue, whose car collided with a picnic truck near Momence on Sunday, and Emil Wennerstrom, 70 years old, who was killed in a collision near Oglesby.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gotha, 72 years old, whose home is believed to be in Chicago, was killed when the automobile in which she was riding overturned at Mansfield, O. Melvin Vander Wyk, 25 years old, of Harvey, was killed when his car crashed into a Wabash train at North Liberty, Ind.

2 LOSE LIVES BY DROWNING IN FOURTH OUTINGS

Two drownings were recorded yesterday in the Chicago area as a result of holiday outings.

One Chicago youth was drowned and three companions were saved by their own efforts after their rowboat capsized in a rapids of the Kankakee river near Momence, Ill.

EDWARD BISKUPSKI.

The youth drowned was Edward Biskupski, 18 years old, of 2858 East 84th street. His friends who swam ashore and saved themselves were Walter Kalka, 17, of 8401 Escanaba avenue; Thomas Buda, 18, of 8417 Escanaba avenue, and Leo Lyczyski, 19, of 8342 Colfax avenue.

The other drowning occurred in the Des Plaines river near Libertyville. Ottis Clankscales, 28 years old, of 18th and Honore streets, North Chicago was the victim. He sank in a 15 foot water hole as his brother-in-law and sister, Mrs. Clarence Wakefield, also of North Chicago, looked on helpless to aid him.

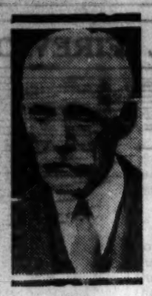
MELLON CALLS CONFIDENCE BEST CURE FOR YANKS

Speaks in London at 4th of July Fete.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 4.—"Just as soon as we are able to think again in terms of what we have and what we are, rather than what we have lost, confidence will return to the United States," Ambassador Andrew W. Mellon told the American colony tonight at the annual Fourth of July dinner.



ANDREW W. MELLON. [Acme Photo.]

"Today we are suffering from a lack of confidence, not as regards fundamentals, but only as regards the best means of overcoming the difficulties immediately ahead. These difficulties we shall overcome in time. All sources of our national wealth are still there. We still have our vast national resources, our great industrial organization with its complete and modern equipment, and as efficient laborers as any to be found in the world.

"Still Have Will to Work."

"We still have the will to work and there is no real cause for worry as long as we believe, as we still do, that work in some form is the only honorable occupation."

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia university, New York, also addressed the audience, declaring that "the interdependence of nations is the twentieth century corollary of the declaration of independence."

"We can no longer solve the problems of the twentieth century by reciting the maxims of the eighteenth century or shibboleths of the nineteenth century."

President Lebrun Speaker.

PARIS, July 4.—(AP)—President Alfred Lebrun of France tonight appealed to the United States and his own country—"Two great world democracies"—to strive for liberty of the world by mutual sacrifices and by fructifying their centuries-old friendship.

His address was the climax of the annual Fourth of July observance here and was given before the American chamber of commerce's banquet, where he was guest of honor.

Frank B. Kellogg, former American secretary of state and co-author of the Briand-Kellogg pact outlawing war, called for world disarmament and departed from his prepared text to praise the Hoover plan to cut armaments nearly one-third.

He said this was proof that America is "desirous heart and soul of coöperating in a solution of world problems."

Attacks "Shylock Criticism."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, July 4.—Two thousand persons assembled in the Rebild park today to observe Independence day. The park is the only American park in another country. F. W. B. Coleman, American minister to Denmark, attacked the European press as unfair and unjust in branding Americans as "Shylocks." Dr. Max Henius of Chicago, father of the Rebild idea, also spoke.

Unveil Statue to Col. House.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, July 4.—A statue to Col. Edward M. House, friend and adviser of the late Woodrow Wilson, was unveiled here today at Poland's celebration of the American Independence day. The statue was donated by Ignace Paderewski. It stands in a park named in honor of the great pianist.

WAR VETERAN DIES ON PIER.

Burrows Mullen, about 35 years old, a war veteran, died suddenly of heart disease yesterday on the Navy pier. His address has not been learned.

LIBERTY BELL VIEWED BY THOUSANDS AS FOURTH OBSERVANCE

Philadelphia, Pa., July 4.—(AP)—Amid scenes inseparably linked with the nation's history, Philadelphians gathered today at Independence hall to commemorate the 156th anniversary of "the glorious Fourth."

Striking the keynote for scores of neighborhood celebrations, the exercises at the birthplace of the Declaration of Independence paid tribute to the revolutionary heroes who proclaimed the country's freedom at this very spot.

Ernest Lee Jahncke, assistant secretary of the navy, gave the principal oration in the absence of President Hoover who was unable to attend. There also was a parade of military and civic organizations to Independence hall.

The historic shrine was thrown open to the throngs who invariably crowd its sacred portals to view the famous Liberty bell and other treasures. The tower on the noted old structure recently was X-rayed to insure the safety of visitors.

One of the highlights of the program was the customary reading of the Declaration of Independence. This year it was read by Charles Hoefleck, a high school student.

Manila Celebrates the Day.

MANILA, P. I., July 4.—(AP)—Before the United States began its formal celebration of the Fourth of July, the Philippines, aided by a difference in time, had completed celebration of Independence day. Today's principal observance in Manila was the usual military parade followed by an address of Governor General Theodore Roosevelt in which he told the Filipinos that privileges enjoyed under the American flag carry definite responsibilities.

POLICEMAN SHOT BY BANDITS IN HOLDUP TO LIVE

Policeman Frank Cunningham, who was shot three times by a bandit early yesterday morning, was reported recovering yesterday in St. Anthony's hospital. He was seriously wounded when he and three other members of a Maxwell street police squad accidentally interrupted a robbery of Jerry Heinig's restaurant and soft drink parlor at 3025 Lafin street.

Cunningham, with Policeman Dan Masterson, George Davis and John Hickey, entered the restaurant as four bandits were menacing the proprietor, his son and three patrons, preparatory to a robbery. The gunmen exchanged shots with the policemen and Cunningham was wounded. Three of the bandits escaped through a rear door. A fourth who identified himself as Harry King, 22 years old, and said he lives at 3130 Maypole avenue, ran out the front door and was captured. He denied that he knew his three companions in the face of continuous police questioning yesterday.

165 COAST GUARD FLEET ORDERED TO HUNT YACHT

Washington, D. C., July 4.—(AP)—The coast guard today ordered 165 cutters and two destroyers to search for the yacht Curlew, missing participant in ocean races from Montauk Point to Bermuda.

The guard issued its orders after parents of persons on the boat had definitely established that she was missing.

The Curlew, the coast guard was informed, left Montauk Point June 25 and was at first reported safely in Bermuda. Later advices said she was not there.

The entire cutter fleet was ordered out by the commander of the New York division of the coast guard. Some of them may not have enough fuel aboard to participate in the search.

CROWD BATTLES LONDON POLICE AT MURDER TRIAL

Mrs. Barney Trembles as Charge Is Read.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 4.—Rioting by would-be spectators marked the opening at Old Bailey today of the trial of Mrs. Elvira Dolores Barney, wife of a New York cabaret singer and daughter of Sir John and Lady Mullens, charged with the murder of Thomas William Scott Stephen at her Mayfair apartment on May 30.

Although the public was notified through the press days ago that only those with special permits would be admitted, long before midnight last night hundreds of people were lined up at the entrance. At midnight the police ordered them to leave and not to return until 9 o'clock this morning.

The crowd, however, paced up and down outside all night, some sleeping in doorways and before 8 o'clock this morning a crowd of 500 was assembled.

Crowd Battles Police.

Meanwhile a queue of privileged ticket holders, chiefly well dressed women, had formed. When the gates opened to admit the ticket holders, the mob charged in the entrance, sweeping aside the police. Reinforcements rushed up and there was a free for all in which the police, shoulder to shoulder, fought the frenzied mob.

Several policemen had their helmets bashed over their eyes, some were bowled over and trampled on. Many casualties occurred in the crowd but with the arrival of mounted reinforcements, order was eventually restored.

The courtroom was crowded. There was a tense silence as the clerk called loudly, "Elvira Dolores Barney."

Mrs. Barney, dressed in black, setting off her nearly platinum blond hair, appeared to be trembling. Her face was ashen. She remained standing while the clerk read the charge of wilful murder.

"Do you plead guilty or not guilty?" he asked.

In a clear voice she replied: "Not guilty."

Doctor Supports Explanation.

The case for the crown was then opened by Sir Percival Clarke and all the former evidence reviewed, including Mrs. Barney's statement that Stephen was accidentally killed in struggling over the gun.

That statement was somewhat supported by the first witness, a Dr. Durant, whom Mrs. Barney had called after the shooting. He related the story she had told him at that time of a quarrel over another woman and Stephen's threat to go to the other woman. Mrs. Barney said she had tried to prevent his leaving and Dr. Durant quoted her as saying "the revolver went off."

Later on cross examination Dr. Durant said Mrs. Barney was in such a "crazy state of mind" at the time she could not have invented the story.

HERRIOT DELAYS BUDGET CRISIS UNTIL HIS RETURN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 4.—After a hot day politically and climatically, in which he succeeded in putting off the budget crisis, Premier Herriot left for Lausanne late tonight for the reparations meetings.

During the torrid day Herriot conferred with his cabinet, the chamber of deputies' balky finance committee and finally his party group—the Radical Socialists. The upshot was his request to reconsider the budget plan and, if it cannot be approved, to put off condemning it until the middle of the week, when he hopes to return from Lausanne.

That the heat was not limited to the weather was evident late this afternoon when scores of police guarded the chamber of deputies. Radical groups of government employés gathered to demonstrate against the proposal to cut all wages five per cent. Three hundred were arrested. Among them one member of the chamber of deputies—a communist.

SULU PRINCESS, SULTAN'S NIECE, BECOMES BRIDE

JOLO, P. I., July 4.—(AP)—Princess Mayang Dayang, niece and stepdaughter of the sultan of Sulu, and Datu Ombra Amilbangsa, several years her junior, were quietly married yesterday at the sultan's palace.

A pretentious civil marriage feast is planned for a few weeks hence after the sultan attends the opening of the Philippine legislature at Manila. The sultan is a territorial senator.

Last year the princess filed a claim with the United States department of state to a group of islets near Borneo. She is credited with much influence among the Moros, along with the younger princess, Tarhata. Amilbangsa has been studying law at Manila.

Trial of Knight's Daughter Nearly Causes Riot

60,000 AT WAR TOURNEY; FINAL SHOW TONIGHT

Overflow Crowd of 20,000.

Sixty thousand Chicagoans celebrated the Fourth at a mammoth fireworks display at the military tournament in Soldiers' field last night. The tournament will end in a blaze of glory with the final performance tonight, for which Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commander of the 2,000 troops engaged, has announced a double program of fireworks and sensational stunts by four squadrons of army air corps fighting planes.

MAJ. GEN. PARKER.

Several thousand persons were turned away at the gates when they sought admission to Soldiers' field. In the bowl were 40,000 enthusiastic spectators, who roared with delight at the diving attacks of the fighting planes, applauded the tableaux of Revolutionary war days, gasped at the realistic reproduction of the battle of Cantigny of the world war, and remained for three quarters of an hour after the show had finished to watch the prolonged fireworks display.

20,000 Outside the Field.

Twenty thousand persons massed south of the Field museum and the aquarium to watch the air corps and fireworks displays. They could not see the maneuvers on the floor of the bowl, but to accommodate them at the last show tonight Maj. Gen. Parker announced that he will place 50,000 seats on sale today at 50 cents each. The extra performance tonight was scheduled to accommodate persons who planned to attend the tournament on Sunday night, which was called off on account of rain. Their Sunday tickets will be honored.

Traffic was blocked in all directions from Soldiers' field for half an hour before and after last night's show and was congested along Michigan avenue for many blocks north, south, and west of the loop. The large attendance last night and the equally large attendance anticipated at tonight's final performance are expected to bring a material increase in receipts, which will be divided equally between the Cook County Joint Emergency Relief fund and the Army Relief society.

Gov. Emmerson Is Guest.

Gov. Emmerson was Maj. Gen. Parker's guest at the show last night. Consul General Guiseppe Castruccio of Italy reviewed the participating troops with Gen. Parker and Gov. Emmerson. Eight hundred Italian war veterans and members of Italian societies, with colors, paraded during the performance, and fourteen girls, members of the Italian Woman's club auxiliary, danced the tarantella.

The fireworks display at the close of the final performance tonight will be the most elaborate ever staged in Chicago, Gen. Parker said. Besides the bursting, multicolored flares, fountains, pinwheels, and rockets, there will be a number of scenes in colored flame. They will include "The Battle of Yorktown," showing the fortification, the city and guns and soldiers in action; the portrait of George Washington, the Statue of Liberty, Liberty Bell, Niagara Falls, a battleship scene, and the American flag.

Mule in Comedy Act.

One of the funniest acts in the show is that of a trained mule, who battles a red-headed cop and a darky driver. The Fort Dearborn massacre is realistically portrayed, including the scalping of women and little children. Infantry rushes, by squad, platoon and company, with an accompanying barrage of artillery, show the tactics used by American troops in capturing the village of Cantigny in the late war. A tank is blown up by enemy shells.

The finals of the tournament jumping contest will be run off tonight, with army mounts and riders pitted against civilian mounts and riders. Ukrainian and Lithuanian groups will appear in songs, dances, and musical selections. The looping comet will blaze its trail through the sky.

NORTH SIDE STORE ROBBED.

A hatless bandit held up Miss Jean Healy, 23 years old, of 817 Lakeside place, clerk in the Martha Washington candy store at 3823 Broadway yesterday, and robbed her of $35.

Mrs. Elvira Dolores Barney, who went to trial yesterday in London, charged with murder of Thomas W. S. Stephen, wealthy Irish sportsman.

ALTERIE TRIAL FOR KIDNAPING IS SET FOR TODAY

Louis [Two Gun] Alterie, one time well known gangster who was supposed to have retired to become a Colorado rancher, is scheduled for trial this morning before Judge John Prystalski in the Criminal court on a charge of kidnaping. Buster Brown, another gangster, is a co-defendant with Alterie on the charge of kidnaping Edward Dobkin, who uses the name of Shamus O'Brien, for $8,000 ransom.

Assistant State's Attorney Ross Lee Laird, who is in charge of the prosecution, denied a rumor current in the Criminal court to the effect that the prosecution will dismiss the charges made against Alterie at the time that the kidnapers of Dr. Max Gecht were rounded up.

The prosecution, it is reported, will be in the unusual position of not really having a complaining witness. Dobkin, a wealthy gambler, will not identify either Alterie or Brown, it is reported.

BINGHAM'S BEER BILL FACES HARD FIGHT IN SENATE

Both Sides Likely to Talk Measure to Death.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 4.—[Special.]—Supporters of the beer amendment which Senator Hiram Bingham [Rep., Conn.], its author, proposes to bring up in the senate tomorrow learned today that they will have no easy time even to get a vote on the proposal, much less pass it.

Instead of support for the immediate legalization of beer, they have met only with more reluctance on the part of Democratic senators who attended the convention in Chicago and are now in the process of returning to Washington.

Eager for Adjournment.

So extreme is this reluctance on both sides of the aisle separating Republicans from Democrats that more than one observer is ready to predict that, rather than commit themselves on modification, the senate leadership will throw over the home loan bank bill to which the beer amendment is proposed as a rider.

Senator James E. Watson [Rep., Ind.], majority leader, sponsor of the home loan bank bill, is confident that it will not be necessary to take such a drastic step. He believes his colleagues will be willing to vote—and that when they vote they will turn the Bingham amendment down.

Republican drys count on having an out for not voting on beer at this time because their party platform fails to declare either for straight repeal or modification of the Volstead act.

In the words of Senator Watson, they claim they do not wish to "foreclose the issue" which the voters are to decide in November.

Wants Dixie to Speak.

Among the Democrats, particularly the southern drys, the explanation will be that they are not bound by the party plank until the voters of their home states have passed upon it.

As one prominent Democratic senator from a southern state expressed it today:

"The Democratic repeal and modification plank was put over by delegates from states that went for Hoover in 1928. We, from dry states that went Democratic in 1928 don't intend to put our necks in the noose to please Republican states. Let our own states speak first and then we shall be ready to act."

As another Democratic senator put it: "We're not going to pull the Republicans' chestnuts out of the fire."

Representative Fred A. Britten [Rep., Ill.], a leading wet, was, on the other hand, confident that if the Bingham amendment could pass the senate it would be passed by the house.

Votes for Democrats.

"And if it fails in the senate," he said, "then Speaker John Garner, by having his rules committee make the house wet bloc's beer bill the immediate order of business, can in one hour make more votes for the Roosevelt-Garner ticket than he can 'garner' in the next four months by an intensive personal campaign.

Senator Davis Drafts Beer Bill.

Sharon, Pa., July 4.—(AP)—Senator James J. Davis said tonight he will present a bill in congress within the next few days providing for the manufacture of 3.2 per cent beer.

HORNER OFF TODAY ON SUMMER VISITING TOUR OF DOWNSTATE

Henry Horner, Democratic nominee for governor, starts out today on his "friendship campaign" which is aimed to prove to downstate that although he hails from Chicago he does not wear horns.

He will open an all summer visiting tour at Morris tomorrow, and will devote two days to talking things over with the residents of Grundy and La Salle counties, his itinerary including Seneca, Marseilles, Streator, La Salle and Peru. On Friday he will go into the 13th congressional district for a series of stops in Lake, Du Page, Kane, Kendall and McHenry counties.

There will be none of the characteristics of the usual political caravan in the nominee's travels. He will be alone except for some personal friends and he intends, he says, to devote most of his time to talking things over with his fellow citizens. This is in conformity with his pledge that if he is elected he will be governor for the entire state and not for Chicago or any other particular section of the commonwealth.

50,000 CHINESE REDS OPEN DRIVE ON THREE CITIES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, July 5.—Fifty thousand Chinese Reds expelled from Fukien have launched a determined drive toward Canton and invaded northern Kwangtung in the province of Kiangsi. They attacked three cities, Nananfu, Namhung, and Shiukwan. Ten thousand Reds who attacked Nananfu were repulsed. One thousand were killed by government troops, but Namhung, still besieged, likely will be captured by the Reds, who also are attacking Shiukwan.

LIBERTY PARTY NAMES TICKET AT KANSAS CITY

Kansas City, Mo., July 4.—(AP)—Col. Frank E. Webb of San Francisco was nominated here late today for the presidency of the United States by the New Liberty party formed at the "unity convention" as a coalition third party.

The vice presidential nominee is Andrew Nordskog, Los Angeles Liberty party leader. Both were nominated by acclamation after it became apparent that more than two-thirds of the delegates favored them.

U. S. Woman Knocks Out Trainman for Annoying Her

(Copyright, 1932, by the New York Times.)

BUDAPEST, July 4.—Miss Myrtle Hague Robinson, American journalist touring Rumania, is credited in the Hungarian newspaper Uj Nemzedek with knocking out a Rumanian train conductor who annoyed her. She was traveling alone in a first class compartment when the conductor said he wanted the compartment himself. The newspaper woman ordered the conductor to leave and landed a straight left that knocked him out. On the train's arrival at Lorgs she handed him over to the police.

SUPPRESS BEER REBELLION! DRY PLEA TO HOOVER

Women Assail Rum Planks of Both Parties.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Indianapolis, Ind., July 4.—[Special.]—Prohibitionists converged today on Indiana, former bone dry state where both Republican and Democratic state parties in June adopted planks for submission of repeal of the 18th amendment, but the idea of an anti-repealist third party, apart from the old line professional drys, seemed to have difficulty in shoving off from the dock.

Hoover and the Republican straddle plank, Roosevelt and the Democratic repeal plank came in for blistering denunciation. The Hoover straddle was deemed more reprehensible by the irreconcilable drys than the dripping wet plank of the Democrats, which takes a definite stand.

Women's Group Draft Platform.

A platform was adopted by the women's national committee for law enforcement, which Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of Beverly, Mass., its general chairman, says represents 12,000,000 women. But the women's organization is nonfactional and Mrs. Peabody said it cannot make one recommendation for any presidential candidate, but every woman must register her own decision at the polls. So the platform so far is without a candidate to stand on it.

"I have no authority," Mrs. Peabody told the Independence day luncheon, "to commit 12,000,000 women to any man or plank or party, neither can we as an affiliation of great organizations of women assume authority to form a third party, or to become a part of the Prohibition party, even though we may as individuals have our own opinions."

Tonight the Prohibition party opened its convention in Cadle tabernacle to run until Wednesday. In 1928 it polled 20,106 votes in the national election, of which 5,496 were cast in Indiana. Now, with both major parties out for repeal, its leaders theorize there is a chance to fashion upon its framework a party aimed to coalesce the unreconstructed dry vote.

Borah Sends Messsage.

Senator William E. Borah was paged by dry throats at intervals as a possible Moses—Moses and Pharaoh, in fact, paraded in most of the dry speeches. But Borah, it appears, so far has not intimated a desire to jump into the burning bush, or out of it, either.

At the women's meeting Mrs. Peabody read a message from Borah. "Tell the women," said the word from the Idaho senator, who has bolted the Republican straddle plank on the ground that it is too wet for a dry, "to work for the right men for congress. If the women of America will do their part there will be no repeal of the 18th amendment."

D. Leigh Colvin, national chairman of the Prohibition party, who spoke with Borah in Washington relative to a request that Borah let himself be "drafted" as a candidate, remained in a silence all day that was interpreted that Borah had made no commitments. One of Borah's political specialties for the last twenty years has been to talk about third party movements in between campaigns—but he never has joined up.

Make New Declaration.

The women's organization adopted a new declaration of independence at their luncheon. It fairly sizzled. What it said about Andrew Mellon must have made the ambassador's ears tingle even in London. It denounced the Republican and Democratic conventions, and it was rapturously applauded.

At the end William D. Upshaw, former bone dry congressman from Georgia, jumped to his feet waving his crutches in the air. "This is the greatest document," he yelled, "since the days of Jefferson."

Takes Shot at Mellon.

That platform calls on Hoover to suppress the "beer rebellion." The new declaration of independence, read by Mrs. Haines Lippincott of New Jersey, among other things said:

"The terrific power of captains of finance has wrecked our ship of state after looting it and leaving millions in helpless poverty. It has been alleged that Andrew Mellon, whom some consider the worst secretary of the treasury since Judas Iscariot, and the Mellon family hold in their coffers seven billions of dollars—a dangerous sum for a secretary of the treasury who leaves his nation bankrupt while he represents a ruined people at the court of St. James's."

It spoke of Pharaohs of industry. "They offer the nation beer while the people are crying for bread." It said the women call for a Moses, but "the modern Moses looks out for himself and his job and patronage."

One paragraph dwelt upon the "horrors of alcohol." It said, 'Political degenerates" manage American politics.

The platform of the women's dry convention reads as follows:

"The women's national committee for law enforcement states:

"We, representing millions of organized American women, are ashamed and disgraced by the actions of both party conventions.

Flays Both Candidates.

"We do not indorse either party platform. The Democrats offer a man, dripping wet, on a direct repeal platform. The Republican candidate, professing to be dry, indorses indirect repeal platform, in some respects more difficult to meet than an open declaration for repeal. We have not as yet any statement on platform or candidate from a third party.

"The beer rebellion—We recognize the very grave responsibilities which confront the President of the United States, for which he is not entirely responsible, but we demand that he, chief executive of this nation, exercise the powers granted him to quell this 'beer rebellion,' as Washington gave him precedent in 1794."

NEW AIRSHIP'S BOW LIFTED AT CEREMONY AT WORKS IN AKRON

Akron, O., July 4.—(AP)—A small small shiny whistle was blown vigorously today by a young woman from Macon, Ga., and before its shrilling ceased echoing through the sun shot confines of Zeppelin dock, another landmark in American airship construction had been passed.

The occasion was the ceremonious bow lifting of the latest of Uncle Sam's navy airships, the U. S. S. Macon, named in honor of the city of Macon, Ga., and sister ship of the U. S. S. Akron.

Raising of the bow virtually completes the framework of the 6,500,000 cubic foot craft, which is expected to be ready for its trial flights next January.

DRYS FLIRT WITH HOOVER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 4.—[Special.]—What was interpreted as an invitation to President Hoover to hold dry support by repudiating the Republican prohibition plank was issued today by Daniel A. Poling, chairman of the Allied Forces for Prohibition.

Claiming to represent 1,500,000 dry members and 1,600 "militant local units," Mr. Poling, in a formal statement, declared that his organization specifically rejected the Republican resubmission program.

He likewise rejected what he termed the Democratic "barroom" plank and Gov. Roosevelt, leaving President Hoover as the sole possible recipient of dry approval. And on that point the statement said:

"Manifestly it would be unfair further to discuss the Republican plank until the Republican candidate has spoken. This is particularly true since the Republican plank affirms that 'no public official or member of the party should be pledged to choose between party affiliation and his honest convictions upon this issue.'"

SEE REVENUE RISE OF $450,000,000 IF REPEAL WINS

Increase in Wet Sentiment Is Traced.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

If prohibition were repealed the government probably would collect from 20 to 30 times as much revenue as it now gets from alcohol and intoxicants.

The dripping wets predict that the government would get an additional 450 to 500 millions a year. These estimates are based upon the fact that the federal authorities collected $483,050,854 on distilled spirits, fermented liquors and malt beverages in 1919—the year before the advent of national prohibition. The government collected $443,839,545 in 1918. Since then, the wets argue, the population has increased enough to warrant an estimate of 500 million a year in revenue from liquor at present.

The Drys' Argument.

The drys point out that 1918 and 1919 were unusual years and that a more accurate basis of estimating would be to revert to a series of years before 1918.

In the eight years between 1910 and 1918 the federal government's so-called liquor taxes varied between 201 and 294 million dollars annually, while between 1924 and 1931 the annual liquor revenue of Uncle Sam was between 10½ and 27½ million. The internal revenue collections from so-called liquor tax for the two periods referred to are as follows:

Pre-Volstead		Volstead Era
Year.	Taxes paid	Year.	Taxes paid
1910	$261,066,670	1924	$27,585,766
1911	211,804,579	1925	26,904,774
1912	212,042,389	1926	26,506,618
1913	223,314,452	1927	21,594,162
1914	226,179,689	1928	21,195,555
1915	223,948,646	1929	12,776,728
1916	247,453,543	1930	11,695,367
1917	284,008,512	1931	10,452,664

Of the so-called liquor income at present, more than 85 per cent is collected from distilled spirits which are for nonbeverage purposes, and it is generally assumed that a large part of this business would be continued if the eighteenth amendment were repealed. At any rate, some of this business would continue. In the current congressional discussions, it has been estimated that the lifting of prohibition would turn 375 million dollars into the federal treasury.

On Revenue for Cities.

An estimate of the revenue to be obtained by cities is not so easy to make, because the plan of both Republicans and Democrats provides for the abolition of the saloon and other measures to encourage temperance. At one period, Chicago had more than 7,000 saloons, paying $1,000 a year each in license fees. Even in pre-Volstead days, it was admitted that that number was too large, and the city council passed an ordinance providing for the cancellation of permits as saloons went out of business, until the revenue was less than $6,000,000.

If the makers of the platforms mean what they say, the promotion of temperance probably would mean that there would be fewer places where intoxicants could be procured than there were saloons on Jan. 16, 1920, when the eighteenth amendment went into effect.

The expected added revenue is dependent upon the time required to repeal the prohibition amendment. An estimate of that time probably can be based to some extent on the period required to adopt prohibition, although the opposition to Volsteadism at present appears more clearly defined and energetic than was the movement in favor of prohibition back in 1917. The prohibition resolution was adopted by the senate in August, 1917, and by the house on Dec. 17, 1917.

On the date that the eighteenth amendment was declared ratified, there were six states bone dry by popular vote. They were Washington, Oregon, Montana, Colorado, Utah, and Arizona.

PRIMARY MAJORITY FOR NORTH CAROLINA WET IS NEW RECORD

Charlotte, N. C., July 4.—(AP)—Robert R. Reynolds, who favors repeal of prohibition, won the Democratic nomination for senator by the largest majority ever recorded in a North Carolina state primary.

Forty-seven year old attorney of Asheville, Reynolds swamped Senator Cameron Morrison, incumbent, by a vote of two to one.

Reynolds' total surprised even his supporters. Morrison, a lifelong dry, who reaffirmed his loyalty to prohibition after his party's national convention adopted a platform favoring repeal, conceded the nomination to Reynolds before the vote was more than half counted.

When the ballots cast in 1,619 of the state's 1,829 precincts had been tabulated today the count was Reynolds 211,227, Morrison 112,090.

J. C. B. Ehringhaus of Elizabeth City, an attorney and the administration candidate, was nominated for governor, on the face of incomplete returns, by a majority of about 10,000.

If elected in November, Reynolds will take his seat immediately.

Morrison has served as senator for 12 months. He was appointed upon the death of Senator Lee S. Overman.

Reynolds has been a professional wrestler, a deck hand on a cattle boat, an author, and world traveler.

These states represented 4.2 per cent of the population of the country.

Six other states—Idaho, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Georgia, and Florida—were bone dry by legislative enactment. They represented 7.6 per cent of the population. Thus the bone drys represented a total of 11.8 per cent of the population.

The Rising Wet Tide.

There is a striking difference between the prohibition movement in 1919 and the demand for its repeal at present. If the delegates to both the Republican and Democratic conventions can be relied upon as expressing the sentiment of the districts and states they represented, there is nearly four times as much "dripping wet" sentiment for repeal at present as there was bone dry sentiment in 1919. The delegates from the following states to both Democratic and Republican conventions, asserted that they desired the repeal of the eighteenth amendment: Arizona, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, Wisconsin, and Wyoming. These states represent 43.2 per cent of the nation's population.

After congress proposed prohibition it took less than 13 months for three-fourths of the states to ratify the amendment.

In view of the fact that the wet sentiment appears greater than was the dry sentiment in 1917, when it took thirteen months to ratify the prohibition act, it is to be assumed that repeal should be effected in a much shorter time than was prohibition.

ROOSEVELT AND TAMMANY JOIN IN HARMONY 4TH

Nominee Home; Message Cheered at Wigwam.

New York, July 4.—[Special.]—All seemed harmonious and serene on the Tammany-Roosevelt-Smith front today as the Democratic nominee returned to the capital at Albany from Chicago and the Tiger's legions gathered for an old fashioned Independence day celebration in the wigwam down in Union square.

While Tammany sachems and the lesser fry in the hall were cheering Gov. Roosevelt's words in a telegram of greeting to Chieftain John F. Curry, the state executive and party standard bearer arrived home at Albany to the acclaim of capitol crowds. Mr. Roosevelt was soon immersed in a mass of congratulatory messages and pressing plans for a busy week of preparations for the national campaign.

Smith Joins in Cheering.

In the Tammany conclave, there was every evidence not only of Democratic harmony in New York but of Tammany support of the governor's presidential campaign, as well as confidence that November will bring victory to the national party.

The meeting radiated the assurance of the nominee himself. Those who saw him reported that Mr. Roosevelt was all confidence that the breaks in the Democratic line made by the convention row over the contest between him and former Gov. Smith would be invisible before November balloting time.

The wave of enthusiasm that swept over the hall during the reading of Mr. Roosevelt's message was joined in without a sign of reluctance by Al Smith, the vanquished, and he applauded readily when the nominee's name was mentioned before the message was read.

Lots of Noise for Smith.

The governor's message stressed the assurance he felt that "Tammany will follow the banners when the cause of democracy is at stake," and his confidence that "we will win the coming struggle."

Al, however, beamed as the Tammany men he sat among showed unmistakable loyalty to him. The audience interrupted Senator Wagner in a wild demonstration when the speaker mentioned the 1928 nominee's "brilliant and matchless administration" of the state government. And the meeting was brought to a rousing climax when Smith acceded to the demands for a word from him. Al is still the man of the hour with Tammany, and while the general attitude of the crowd in the hall was one of accord with Mr. Roosevelt, it indicated merely party loyalty rather than personal admiration.

Makes Brief Speech.

To cries of, "Speech, Al," and "Atta Boy, Al," the Happy Warrior, again himself in the face of such a tribulation, arose and said a few words entirely devoted to the occasion, stressing the need for safeguarding the constitution, and that "liberty is not a thing you can hand to a person all tied up in a bundle."

Despite the pleas of reporters he did not give a hint as to his attitude in the campaign of Gov. Roosevelt or whether he will actively support his party's nominee. It was pointed out today that as recently as June 13 Smith, with sixty other Democratic leaders in the nation, signed a formal pledge to support the candidate selected by the convention.

Quiet Return Trip.

Mr. Roosevelt's journey home from Chicago by train was not spectacular. A rain and the holiday kept down the size of the crowds which greeted the nominee at Rochester and Syracuse. But Albany turned out several thousand strong at the railroad station and at the mansion.

The governor announced that he did not expect to hold any important conferences this week, but would get down to active work of other kinds toward an early campaign in the direction of the White House.

WALKER IS DRAFTING ANSWER TO SEABURY TO SEND ROOSEVELT

New York, July 4.—[Special.]—Confirmation of reports that Gov. Roosevelt will have both sides of the Mayor James J. Walker removal case before him for decision next week was seen here today when Mr. Walker, returning from the Democratic national convention at Chicago, said on his arrival that he planned to start drafting his reply to the governor today.

At the same time it was said by political figures who professed to be acquainted with Mr. Roosevelt's attitude on the removal accusations that the governor regards them as very serious. There is a strong possibility that the governor, although he has as yet not made up his mind about the case, will act upon Mr. Walker's written reply alone, without the accompanying formality of a public hearing, these informed observers said.

The charges, of which the principal set is based upon an analysis by Samuel Seabury of testimony taken before the Hofstadter legislative committee, were forwarded by the governor to the mayor just before the latter departed for Chicago. In an accompanying letter Mr. Roosevelt asked an early answer but did not fix a definite time limit.

DONOVAN G. O. P. CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR

New York, July 4.—[Special.]—The boom for Colonel William J. Donovan for the Republican gubernatorial nomination came out in the open today with the announcement of the formation of the "win with Donovan" committee, organized to work in his behalf.

The chairman of the committee is Melvin C. Eaton, Republican leader of Chenango county.

Colonel Donovan was commander of the "Fighting 69th" during the war, and was assistant to the attorney general during the Coolidge administration. He had been reported slated for the post of attorney general in the Hoover administration, and resentment was expressed by his friends when the appointment was not made.

"KINGFISH" LONG SEES LANDSLIDE FOR ROOSEVELT

New Orleans, La., July 4.—(AP)—The Louisiana "Kingfish" came home from the Democratic national convention today predicting the Republicans won't carry a single southern state in the presidential election.

"With Roosevelt, our party cannot lose. It will be a landslide for Roosevelt," said Senator Huey T. Long.

ROOSEVELT WILL START CAMPAIGN IN CONNECTICUT

To Address Bridgeport Dinner to McNeil.

Bridgeport, Conn., July 4.—[Special.]—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt will personally inaugurate his presidential campaign in Connecticut, for many years a Republican presidential stronghold, at a dinner in Bridgeport, Democratic National Committeeman Archibald McNeil Jr. announced today on his arrival here from the national convention in Chicago.

The dinner at which Gov. Roosevelt will appear here in his campaign inaugural for Connecticut will be tendered to Mr. McNeil in honor of his reelection in an effort to unite the old guard-Smith and new guard-Roosevelt forces of the state which have been at swords' points for many months preceding the convention.

No date has been fixed.

Garner to Tour U. S.

Washington, D. C., July 4.—[Special.]—Speaker John N. Garner, Democratic vice presidential nominee expects to be the traveling half of the Roosevelt-Garner ticket. He announced today that during the coming months he will take an extended swing around the country, speaking in New York, Chicago and Boston, making back platform speeches in the smaller towns and generally letting the voters get acquainted with the rough and ready Garner personality.

It was indicated that Mr. Garner looks for Gov. Roosevelt to play a behind the scenes part, coming out in person only for a limited number of big rallies. Details of the arrangements, however, will be worked out at a meeting between the two candidates to be held shortly after congress adjourns.

NEW YORK HEADQUARTERS.

Robert Jackson of New Hampshire, who was reëlected secretary of the Democratic national committee on Saturday, ventured the opinion yesterday that Roosevelt campaign headquarters will be in the east instead of in Chicago, as had been conjectured for some time.

"Those questions have not been acted on definitely yet," said Secretary Jackson, "but it is expected that the national committee will take over the Roosevelt headquarters in New York City. And, of course, it will continue the activities of the committee headquarters in Washington."

The committee secretary said there probably will be a branch headquarters in Chicago and that there may be a Roosevelt headquarters in each one of the 48 states.

SEN. HIRAM JOHNSON PRAISES ROOSEVELT; WON'T TALK OF BOLT

Washington, D. C., July 4.—[Special.]—Praise for the acceptance speech of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt came today from Senator Hiram Johnson [Rep., Cal.], former Bull Mooser and foe of President Hoover.

He would not, however, state whether he would turn his approval of the Democratic candidate and his enmity toward the President into action.

"There was something fine, and gallant, and exhilarating," said Senator Johnson, "in Roosevelt's scrapping the old tradition, and at once, when nominated, arranging to meet the Democratic convention. The imaginative get a thrill from the Democratic candidate writing in a speeding airplane the most important speech of our day and in his whole history.

"The writing of such a speech under such circumstances is a tribute to the poise and the good nerves of the writer.

"It is a tribute, too, to frankness and exhibits no fear of expression of views.

ASSAILS PARTIES FOR NEGLECT OF FARM PROBLEMS

10,000 Attend Meeting at Ottumwa.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ottumwa, Ia., July 4.—[Special.]—Both political parties, in their conventions and in congress, have displayed a "callousness and even defiant indifference" to agricultural conditions and their improvement. This declaration was made here this afternoon by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau federation, addressing a crowd of 10,000 farmers gathered from southeastern Iowa in one of several hundred such picnic celebrations staged by the federation over the nation today.

EDWARD A. O'NEAL.

"Greedy financial and industrial interests," according to O'Neal, who arrived here today from several weeks of farm relief lobbying in Washington, "have forgotten that the farmers have been the chief factor in national development and agriculture has been debased with apparent unconcern."

While the platforms of the Republicans and Democrats just made in Chicago both contain some of the suggestions of the organized farmers O'Neal declared that the Democratic platform is more definite. He expressed the federation's pleasure at the interpretations on this platform voiced by Franklin D. Roosevelt Saturday, pointing out that land utilization and ridding the nation of existing surpluses through amendment of the federal marketing act were relief measures sought of both parties during their conventions.

O'Neal said farmers deplored the failure of the conventions to discuss the great economic problems threatening the nation at greater length and in more specific terms.

SLAIN IN BASEMENT FIGHT.

Robert Williford, 32 years old, 517 Sedgwick street, a Negro, was shot and killed yesterday following an argument in the basement of his home. Police sought Albert Ballard, another Negro, as his assailant.

BRITISH STRIKE AT IRISH WITH A 100% TARIFF

Act as De Valera Refuses to Pay Land Debts.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 4.—The British government tonight was empowered to impose a tariff up to 100 per cent on imports from the Irish Free State by the house of commons. The measure was introduced by J. H. Thomas, secretary for dominions, in retaliation against President Eamon de Valera's refusal to pay the semi-annual installment of $11,000,000 on Irish land annuities. The vote was 223 to 31.

The tariff was voted after Thomas disclosed that De Valera had definitely refused to permit a commonwealth court to arbitrate in the dispute with Great Britain over the land annuity payments and other charges assumed by the Free State in the financial settlement after the Anglo-Irish treaty of 1921.

Wins on Initial Test.

The house voted to support the British government's policy by a margin of 278 votes in the initial test. The vote was taken on an amendment seeking to delay action, and the government was upheld in its demand for immediate consideration, 321 to 43. Later the government majority increased to 302 votes when a Laborite amendment to exclude food products from the proposed duties was voted down, 346 to 44.

Thomas opened the debate with the assertion that the government's only purpose to impose the tariff was to recoup the money lost by the Free State's refusal to pay the land annuities.

"The government asks the confidence of the house to impose immediately duties in such a way as it feels necessary, but only to obtain the amount due, not one copper more," he said. "When that amount is obtained, we cease.

Tariff War Feared.

"This is not intended to be a tariff war. Perhaps it will develop into that, but it does not prevent us from putting this simple question, 'Do you intend to allow other people to get away with your money, or don't you?'"

Thomas insisted that the British government has no intention of submitting the question of payments to any but an imperial tribunal, adding that there was no indication that De Valera will relent in that direction. De Valera has insisted all along that an international court should arbitrate in the dispute.

After the address by Thomas, Arthur Greenwood, former Labor government official, surprised the house by announcing that land annuities collected from Irish farmers had been paid into a special fund in anticipation of arbitration. The surprised secretary for dominions, however, insisted upon his resolution.

When De Valera first announced his intention to withhold payments, he claimed the right to choose members of the court not connected with the British empire.

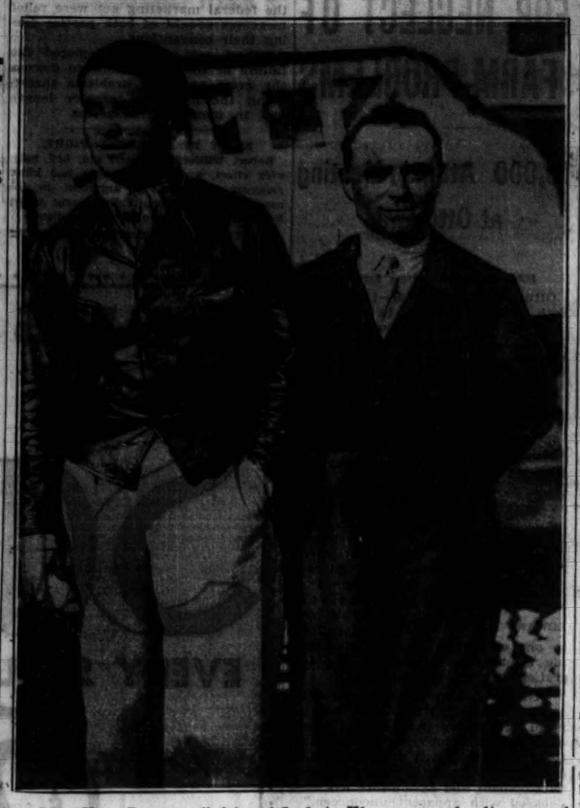
An interchange of letters followed. The last message was received from De Valera this morning and read by Thomas. In it De Valera accused Britain of vitiating the whole principle of arbitration by insisting on a particular kind of court.

Thomas took it as a final refusal, declaring there is nothing left for Britain now but to proceed with a tariff which would enable her to recoup her losses.

Economic Chaos Feared.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, July 4.—Chaos in the trade relations between the Irish Free State and Great Britain was predicted here today as a result of the Anglo-Irish squabble over land annuity payments.

Flyers Found in Australian Bush



Capt. Hans Bertram (left) and Ludwig Klausmann, who disappeared May 17, and had been given up for dead, discovered safe with tribe of natives who had supplied them with food.

GERMAN FLYERS, GIVEN UP FOR DEAD; ARE SAVED

Two Found in Rags and Half-Starved.

SYDNEY, Australia, July 4.—(AP)—Capt. Hans Bertram, German aviator, and his mechanic, Ludwig Klausman, were found alive today after having been missing since May 17.

On that day they took off in Bertram's plane from Kupang island on a flight to Darwin. They did not reach there and were given up for lost when a search revealed no trace of them.

Two weeks ago natives turned over to a missionary a handkerchief and a cigaret case with Bertram's initials. They said they had found them about 100 miles north of Wyndham where they also had seen the footprints of two men going south.

This spurred the search anew and the abandoned plane was found with a message that the flyers had gone into the bush. It was feared that they had ben slain by hostile natives, but the search continued.

Meanwhile a tribe of natives had found the men and supplied them with food before sending for help.

The native messenger brought an expedition to the place today. The rescuers found Bertram and his companion nearly starved and in rags. The pilot told them they had been forced down by a bad storm with only a meager supply of provisions.

They tried to paddle from the island where they had landed to the mainland in a float from their plane, but they were too weak and thereafter they were able to spend only half an hour a day searching for help.

Revive Autoist Overcome by Gas Fumes in Garage

John E. Hard, 50 years old, 2434 South 53d avenue, Cicero, was revived yesterday afternoon by an inhalator squad of the Berwyn fire department after he had been overcome by carbon monoxide gas in a garage he rented at 3114 Home avenue, Berwyn. He was unconscious when he was discovered in the garage. The engine of his car was running.

AUSTRALIA FINDS EXTRAVAGANCE A COSTLY LESSON

State Unable to Extend Further Help.

spoon fed workers huddling in the cities may not be able to take it.

What, then, is the alternative? In this campaign, as in future campaigns, step by step, it lies toward complete state control of production in farm and factory, distribution by government methods, government control of land and property and money. Yet it is not called communism in Australia. It is called the protection of individual "rights" by government mandate.

This situation faces Queensland as it does New South Wales. The "rights" involved are considered to consist first of all of a basic common wage, under which a fair and reasonable living may be accorded to every man, regardless of the economic factors at home or abroad.

Queensland has been disappointed in its efforts towards this end so far, although, due to its milder climate and immense resources it is better off than other Australian states at present. It is a matter of relative poverty. Its streets at least are free from the beggars who infest Sydney, but there are stories of semi-starvation coming down even from the farming districts of the north, where there has been a hard summer drought.

One Family Eats Cat.

One family of settlers is reported to have killed and eaten a cat. A minister in Brisbane said that he preached the other night to more than 60 homeless and hungry men and had to turn them out in the rain after the meeting. He thought the government should build a shelter for them.

he government would like to do many things, but cannot. It has been on a financial joyride so long that it will take years to catch up with expenditures already incurred. Taxation is at the saturation point, or the point of diminishing returns.

The state's public debt is now £112,-62°,979, owed in Australia, London, and New York. Half of this has been spent in unproductive railways and public buildings. It is well to think of this when looking at Brisbane's skyline, its enormous blocks of public buildings, its new $5,000,000 town hall, the cornerstone of which was laid by the prince of Wales in 1920.

Abandoned Building Falls; Rains Weaken Foundation

An abandoned frame building at 1024 South Damen avenue, its wooden pilings rotted with age, collapsed early yesterday. No one was injured. Police said that the recent heavy rains had weakened the already dilapidated foundation.

Youth Makes Own Diving Suit

Gilbert Campbell Jr., 18 years old, 2537 Ewing avenue, Evanston, has designed and constructed a diving helmet, and yesterday he entertained Fourth of July bathers with dives off Evanston beaches. He conceived the idea after reading of an expedition to explore the floor of the tropic seas and seeing a motion picture of deep sea divers. The helmet is constructed of cast iron with a pane of heavy plate glass set in front. The air is supplied to the diver through a hose attached to a bicycle pump which a friend operates in a rowboat. The helmet weighs 70 pounds. With it Gilbert has been able to descend 15 feet in the water.

ITALY DEMANDS CANCELLATION OF ALL WAR DEBTS

Lausanne Verdict Must Be Final, Grandi Says.

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, July 4.—Just at the moment of this conference when Germany was really at grips with the five creditor powers over the amount she would pay to lift her reparations burden, the principle of such a payment being admitted, Italy tonight suddenly reverted to her original thesis of cancelling of all intergovernmental war debts and reparations.

Dino Grandi, Italian foreign minister, gave an interview to a Paris newspaper and then distributed it to everybody announcing that the only possible solution here is a clean slate.

Settlement Must Be Final.

He referred pointedly to the proposal made to the Germans by Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain in behalf of the five powers, supposedly including Italy, that Germany settle the reparations problem for all time by paying a lump sum. Grandi said:

"The Lausanne conference was not convened to insure us future and uncertain payments which could only prolong and therefore aggravate the abnormal character of the present unnatural situation. The settlement reached at Lausanne must be final," he went on, "and cancellation applied equally by all European powers, creditors, and debtors, of reparations and war debts. Only thus shall we pave the way for that general settlement in accordance with the declaration of June 16."

He meant the baby moratorium suspending all reparations and debts payments for the duration of the conference which, he said, "points the way."

"Forgive Our Debts."

Grandi wants the sponge applied to Italy's debt to Britain as well as Germany's debts to Italy. This was the upshot of his gesture tonight which has thrown an already confused conference into deeper confusion.

He said it in as many words:

"Forgive our debts as we forgive our debtors," he said in the Latin text from the Bible, which differs from the King James version in its use of the word "trespasses."

So Herriot returns from Paris tomorrow to find the so-called five power front broken by Italy's defection. MacDonald presented the five power idea to Chancellor von Papen of Germany on Sunday. Von Papen came back with what appeared to be a counter proposal.

Today the Germans were told that Von Papen's counter proposal that Germany settle for 500 million dollars instead of a billion dollars, as suggested by MacDonald, and his various conditions were not acceptable.

Put It Up to United States.

Then Grandi spoke up. His attitude is that the Germans' proposal is equivalent to canceling German reparations, for Von Papen's figure only covers the German payments for this year, during the Hoover moratorium.

In other words, Germany's obligations would be ended from July of this year. So Grandi reasons the slate should be wiped clean all around.

Grandi would put it straight up to the United States by a general inter-European cancellation, he said tonight. He would go further than even Germany in canceling of obligations. He wants England to abandon all her claims here and now regardless of what the United States does. It puts MacDonald, who came here to get the French to abandon their claims on Germany and just about succeeded, into a deep hole.

The French, although inclined to fulminate tonight, were not at all clear as to their reaction to Grandi's declaration.

MORE BAIN BANK DEBTORS WILL BE CALLED THIS WEEK

There will be another week of technical testimony in the trial of South Park Commissioner John Bain, former head of a chain of twelve banks, and Bain's two sons and son-in-law, according to Special Prosecutor Edwin J. Raber. The trial is before Judge John M. O'Connor, without a jury, and is held in the county building.

The witnesses of last week were all debtors to the various Bain banks and the witnesses this week will also be debtors. So far practically all the borrowers from the Bain banks said they put up Bain stock as collateral and they have paid nothing to the receivers on their indebtedness since the banks were closed a year ago.

"We must show that the Bain banks were insolvent before they were closed and that each of the defendants knew this to be a fact," Mr. Raber explained yesterday. "We allege in twelve counts of the seventy-four counts in the indictment that the defendants were in a conspiracy to keep insolvent banks open. We expect to show from the nature of the loans, many of which were made to enable the borrower to purchase Bain stocks and bonds, that the banks were hopelessly insolvent for several years."

Raber said that after he established the insolvency of the banks he will undertake to prove the conspiracy between the members of the Bain family.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

BEER IS UP TO GARNER.

Mr. Garner, speaker of the national house of representatives, is the nominee of the Democratic party for Vice President. The platform adopted before he was nominated and accepted by him and by the head of the ticket, Gov. Roosevelt, not only declares for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment but for the interim amendment of the Volstead act to permit the manufacture, sale and taxation of alcoholic beverages. Gov. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner have indorsed the platform without qualification and with enthusiasm.

One feature of the Democratic resolution is its immediacy with regard to relaxation of prohibition even under the amendment. "Pending repeal," the convention resolved, "we favor immediate modification of the Volstead act to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer and other beverages of such alcoholic content as is permissible under the constitution and to provide therefrom a proper and needed revenue."

Mr. Garner is the speaker of a house controlled by the party which makes this statement. Congress is in session. Although Republicans have a majority, nominally at least, in the senate, it is apparent that if the Democratic senators will abide by their party declaration enough Republicans will vote with them to pass a beer bill now. Mr. Garner in the house, where the Democrats control, can depend likewise on some Republican help if he will back a beer bill with his authority. Very likely there will be enough Republican votes to fill the places of any runaway Democrats who may be willing to repudiate their party platform within a fortnight of its adoption.

The speaker of the house can advance or retard a vote on the question. If he accepts responsibility for the validity of the promise made by the convention which nominated him, the country can have beer restored to general use, and to taxation, before the campaign fairly starts. He and his Democratic associates in congress can make the pledge good or they can make it questionable. Certainly the voters will not understand what "immediate" means if the Democratic party will not stand by its promise in the house in which it has the votes.

If "immediate" means at the first opportunity, the house of representatives will have passed a beer bill and one authorizing the manufacture and sale "of other beverages" before congress adjourns. The promise does not imply that the Democrats will wait for another election, for the inauguration of another administration, and the session of a new congress. They have the speaker and a majority in one branch of the national legislature now. If they do not use this authority at once to back up the pledges of their convention their sincerity will be questionable and their intentions will be very dubious.

In a large measure the question is up to Mr. Garner, the candidate for Vice President.

MODIFICATION IS CONSTITUTIONAL.

Senator Robinson of Indiana, commenting on the Democratic platform declaration for "immediate modification" of the Volstead act, says: "You cannot modify the present law to permit wines and beer without nullifying the constitution."

This an echo of the W. C. T. U. and other die-hard prohibitionists. It has no validity in law or fact. The limit of one-half of 1 per cent fixed by the Volstead act was sustained by the Supreme court on the theory that "congress might reasonably have considered some legislative definition of intoxicating liquor to be essential to effective enforcement of prohibition, and also that the definition provided by the Volstead act was not an arbitrary one." In other words, congress, if it thinks a definition of alcoholic content essential to enforcement, may make such a definition, provided it does not act arbitrarily. In the prohibition cases this court said: "While recognizing that there are limits beyond which congress cannot go in treating beverages as within its power of enforcement, we think those limits are not transcended by the provision of the Volstead act wherein liquors containing as much as one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol by volume and fit for use for beverage purposes are treated as within that power."

That the limit fixed by congress in the Volstead act is sacred and unchangeable under the 18th amendment has no support in the language of the decisions. The Supreme court in these decisions goes as far as possible toward authorizing congress to exercise its discretion—that is, its sense of expediency or public policy—in the enactment of laws under the 18th amendment. It cannot fail to recognize a further exercise of that discretion when congress modifies its definition of intoxicating beverages, provided congress does not go beyond the limits referred to but not defined in the decision quoted above.

Congress beyond question has power to fix a higher content of alcohol for beverages, provided it exercises its discretion "reasonably" and not arbitrarily; that is, provided it does not attempt to legalize a content which the Supreme court must hold incompatible with the 18th amendment. Congress could not legalize a beverage obviously intoxicating under any fair interpretation of the term. Theoretically it could not legalize a beverage obviously not intoxicating, although it did so and was sustained by the court in decisions which will not be considered triumphs of judicial logic or wisdom. That great philosopher, Mr. Dooley, once said "the constitution follows the flag and the Supreme court follows the election returns," a cruel epigram, but not without some justification. A majority of the Supreme court on more than one occasion in its history have supported acts of congress passed under strong public pressure which an impartial legal reasoning would have overruled. There is some justification for this elasticity, since the effect of too sharp a collision between the court and public sentiment might be more unfortunate than that of accepting a bad law. At any rate, if this rule operates in the matter of modification, we may now expect it to operate in its favor. Certainly there is nothing in the decisions of the court on Volstead which forecloses the court from upholding either the repeal of the act or any of the modifications under consideration.

THE ORGANIZING BREED.

When the bonus boys started for Washington from spots all over the country they had just about enough organization to gang a freight train when enough of them got together or to convince a community that the best thing to do was to send them on to get them out. Spontaneity was the spirit of this movement, but when all these detached individuals got to Washington their first impulse was to incorporate in a fashion and bring order into their affairs.

They soon had an executive head with quasi military authority. He had his aids. The rough imitation of a new mining town was provided in the neighborhood of Washington refuse dumps, from which the men seem about to get an epidemic of dysentery, and now there is an improvised police force. Some fifteen or twenty thousand Americans, brought together by a foolishly inspired purpose, congregated in a no man's land and in a short time they started what would be a government, if they were actually isolated and breaking new ground.

The American breed will improvise a government along their traditional lines with the ease and rapidity with which a party of old forest runners, trappers and hunters would knock together a camp for the night. Dump several hundred of this breed before unknown to each other on a newly discovered island and within twenty-four hours they would have a government with an executive and various committees and within a week they would have two political parties, a tariff lobby, an agricultural problem, six miles of streets, plans for a statehouse and an organized kick about the light rates.

Their ancestors have worked out this scheme so often that it is in the blood.

THROW THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT IN REVERSE.

President Hoover has signed the economy bill with, as he said, limited satisfaction. The day he got this precious document from congress the United States fiscal year ended with a deficit of two billions 900 millions. Congress, repudiated by both national conventions, produced a bill cutting costs by $150,000,000. The spendthrift has looked over his debts and decided to cut out one cocktail.

There is a simple way to get the fat out of the federal government. It is to reverse the process by which it was put on, the way a moving picture is shown in reverse. This method would take each growth of government, the latest first, and lop it off. The farm board would be wiped out. The labor department would disappear again into the department of commerce. The shipping board would vanish, etc., etc. Carry the reverse back far enough and the agricultural department would be a small bureau with $1,000 annual appropriation. The federal government has been pretending to go back by taking a side step on the way forward.

Editorial of the Day

WHERE THE MONEY GOES.

[Danville Commercial-News.]

Writing in the Savings Bank Journal, Melvin A. Traylor, Chicago banker and candidate for the presidential nomination at the Democratic national convention, shows that governmental tax levies mean the equivalent of one day's labor each week for every man, woman, and child in the United States. That reveals in a manner which everybody can understand the present burden the taxpayers sustain by reason of extravagance and waste on the part of their representatives in public office.

Before the individual, the corporation, industry, commerce, or any other activity can make a dollar for those interested, the banker points out, they must contribute about $33,000,000 for every working day to the cost of state and local governments, and an additional $13,000,000 daily to support the federal government. Based on the estimated total annual income of $70,000,000,000 for the United States derived from all sources for 1930, about 20 cents out of each dollar goes into the huge tax maw of governmental spending. It amounts to $110 a year for every man, woman, and child.

The sum exceeds by two billions the gross farm value of all agricultural production—crops and live stock—in the United States in 1929. It is only 7 per cent less than the total salaries and wages paid to 10,178,000 officers and employés of more than 210,000 manufacturing establishments in the nation.

The responsibility, as Mr. Traylor shows, rests on the taxpayers. While office holders and congressmen and legislators may be slow to put on the economy brakes after years of reckless spending, the indifference of the voters has encouraged the riot of extravagance. Even the tax organizations have not always been working for the general good in seeking revision of the spending program. Some of them care little about the burden others bear if their own purses can be spared. Others bemoan the cost, but indorse almost every expenditure advanced as a "necessary public improvement."

The country must make up its mind that many of these public "improvements" are not necessary. They may be desirable enough in themselves, but they cost far more than the people of a county, township, or town can afford. Government units must retrench just as the individual families have done. The localities responsible for most of the burden must get along without parks for every neighborhood, ornamental lights, "community houses," and many other "improvements." The states must eliminate boards and commissions. The federal government must curb costly bureaucracy, and congress must turn thumbs down on the continued appeals for funds from small but noisy minorities.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

Hew to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

THIS CHANGING WORLD!

It wasn't so many years ago that a man who was called a beer drinker blushed and muttered that he had to drink it on his doctor's orders. The prohibition lecturers jumped up and down like Apaches doing their war dance when they talked about beer. They said it was the curse of the nation, the bane of civilization. That a man who drank beer was the most horrible crawling worm that ever appeared on the face of the earth. The money spent on beer by the American people every year would build three million schoolhouses and beautiful bungalows for every man, woman, and child in the country. It would give every citizen of the United States four new suits of clothes, a new automobile, a gold watch and chain, a roast chicken every day, three turkeys for Christmas, pay all his debts, and give him a trip to Europe with his family every summer. According to the prohibition workers a man who drank a glass of beer went right straight home and beat up his wife and children and then traded the cook stove and the baby's crib for another glass of beer. BUT NOW! Every day congress is bursting with a new plan to put beer back into circulation. Beer has become our one sole hope for balancing the budget, of keeping the government from going over the hills to the poorhouse. Beer is the bright angel that will keep us from putting a mortgage on the big gold domed capitol and selling the Washington monument to the junk men. Beer! kind, genial, gracious beer is going to put the unemployed back to work and bring back joy and happiness. Anyhow, it looks as though it would help a lot.

Wonder what's become of those prohibition fellows that used to say all those things against beer?

"OF THEE I SING."

Deep in the soul of the age was the dream of this nation;
Clear in the cry and the protest of Puritan and red Cavalier—
Old foes made friends on new fields through the folly of kings;
Then came the plea and the passion of men of all creeds
From the pines to the palms, but the answer was chains;
Yet, the dream rose to daring in that high Declaration
Of the freedom inherent in man . . .

Out of the flaming of war came the birth of a nation;
Out of the Constitution rose a Republic
High with the hopes of a people led by the Lord . . .
Men followed this dream to the sunset in wagons and ox-carts;
They cleft the waters of runaway rivers in keelboat and steamboat;
They rode the Iron Horse to the walls of the mountains,
And raced the iron trails to the singing of seas . . .

Once they paused and in struggle they cast out a lie;
And brother struck brother from Richmond to Shiloh,
And then wept at Springfield as they mourned at Mount Vernon—
O shrines now co-equal in the heart of a nation . . .

Nothing but a little dust,
Yet to that dust we bring
A nation's gratitude and trust—
Of thee we sing.

ABORIGINE.

AND NOW and for some time yet we've got to hear disgusted Republicans and Democrats say: "Well, now, I'll tell you why I can't support the ticket . . ." But if all the Republicans vote for Roosevelt and all the Democrats vote for Hoover—then what? Politics are getting funnier every minute.

THE FOURTH OF JULY isn't what it used to be. Not but what we would gladly give up a finger or a couple of inches of cuticle or peek down a loaded toy cannon to see why it doesn't go just as the boys used to do in celebration of the signing of our glorious Declaration of Independence. It isn't because we are any the less patriotic, but we simply aren't able to shoot off our fingers and ears any more on the Fourth of July—we haven't got the money these days to buy firecrackers and toy cannons and skyrockets.

How Wonderful Is Man!

(From the Aurora Daily Beacon-News.)

A son was born yesterday to William Nickels, 542 Edwards street, at St. Charles hospital.

DO NOT WAKE and call me early, call me early, mother, dear, for tomorrow is the orneriest day in all the glad new year. In all the glad new year, mother, the orneriest, mangiest day, for we'll pay three cents for stamps, mother, we'll pay three cents for stamps.

They used to cost two cents, mother, they used to cost two cents. And we would write to Em and Lou and sometimes to grandpa, too. The mailman would just be loaded down with the letters we would send, but now we'll throw away the ink, this writing game must end. We'd like to send our love to those who're far from hence, but darned if we will do it when the postage costs three cents.

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY is bragging it's got the coldest thing in the world, a refrigerator where the temperature is 400 degrees below zero. It is thought, however, that Mr. Smith's feelings toward Mr. McAdoo of California register some fifty or seventy-five degrees colder than that.

HOW STILL and calm and quiet Chicago is since the Democrats went away. So deep is the silence that as one walks down the street he can hear the sound now and then from a house here and there of some one scraping the states of California and Texas off his map of the United States.

How to Keep Well By Dr. W. A. Evans

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual disease.

[Copyright: 1932: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PELLAGRA.

L. H. WANTS an article on pellagra. He writes from a point well beyond the pellagra belt, and his opinion is that hard times make this disease of interest in many sections where it has not been considered necessary to be on the watch for it.

The theory is that pellagra results from the prolonged use of a diet largely composed of starch, sugar and fat, and deficient in lean meats. Since the lean meat group of foods are comparatively expensive, and the starches and sugars and some of the fats are inexpensive, the people will eat too little of the former and too much of the latter, and in this they will persist until many of them pay the penalty with pellagra.

The symptom that generally awakens suspicion of pellagra is unjustified sunburn. This sunburn comes when there has been little exposure to bright sunlight, certainly less than has ever caused a burn before. It develops on parts of the body where burns are unusual. While the eruption looks like sunburn and causes the same discomforts, there is much about it that awakens suspicion. In addition to other differences it tends to hang on, whereas one expects sunburn to cease troubling in two or three days.

Another symptom that should arouse suspicion is sore tongue. A similar disease in dogs is called black tongue. With the soreness of the tongue there is likely to be redness and soreness of other parts of the mouth. There are other causes of sore tongue, just as there are other causes of the sunburn eruptions, and this symptom, like that of the skin, should not be considered as more than a cause for investigation. There is very apt to be a burning felt behind the breast bone from the stomach up to the mouth.

A peculiar diarrhea is another quite suspicious symptom. In some cases there is mental disturbance which may take the form of insanity—a dementia, often with delusions.

Pellagra can be prevented as well as cured. The general opinion now is that it is due to a deficiency of some part of that vitamin which goes by the name vitamin B complex. A name proposed by Goldberger for this part of the complex vitamin B is vitamin Pp. Among foods which supply this vitamin are lean meats, eggs, fish, yeast, wheat germ, and most vegetables. This vitamin is contained in canned as well as fresh foods.

The same foods that serve as preventives are valuable as cures, provided we increase the allowance of them somewhat. Physicians who treat pellagra prescribe definite quantities of the anti-pellagra foods, but they give no medicines except it be something needed to soothe a troublesome symptom. There is no medicinal specific and the man who buys medicine, thinking he is getting one, is wasting his money. As a rule, those who have pellagra have no money to waste.

PRENATAL INFLUENCE.

A. H. V. writes: In reference to your recent article on prenatal influences, I have a notion that the moods of a mother after conception are reflected in the character and mentality of the child. If the mother gives way, for instance, to morbid day dreams during pregnancy the child will tend to be a morbid and dreamy creature. If she gives way to temper or to worry the child is psychologically tainted accordingly.

2. I have another notion that poisons, such as pus from infected teeth, do mark children to be ugly, or maybe predispose them to convulsions, etc.

3. Re the ever-green question of defective teeth, I have a notion that the cause of half the trouble is too small a jaw for the number of teeth and nondevelopment of the teeth through lack of exercise on hard foods. Give the infant hard food and extract the four teeth just behind the eye teeth as soon as they appear and the teeth would last twice as long.

REPLY.

I have a notion that you are a pretty good notion hatcher. Suspend your notion hatching until you have accumulated more information.

1. A child is likely to inherit his disposition and personality from either parent. That has nothing to do with prenatal influence. It is a matter of inheritance. There is a pretty considerable literature on both of these subjects.

2. Nothing to this notion either.

3. There is considerable basis for this notion, though your program of tooth pulling would need modification.

BLUSHING BRIDE TO BE.

J. T. writes: I am very much embarrassed by being bashful and blushing. I was all right a year ago, but now I blush worse than any one I know of. I am engaged, but I do not want to marry until I am cured of this.

REPLY.

You might have some organic disease. Have a physician examine you to exclude that. If you are all right physically the only cure consists in self-training. Had your engagement anything to do with the onset of the blushing?

LIVER SPOTS.

Mrs. F. F. writes:

1. What causes liver spots on hands and face?

2. Can anything be done to prevent them?

3. To get rid of them?

REPLY.

1. They are toll exacted by time. Probably other causes contribute—for example, fungous growth.

2. I wish I knew.

3. Cures are reported after following free use of a saturated solution of hyposulphite of soda for one week, followed by one week of a bleach such as peroxide, the remedies being used alternatingly for several months.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 5, 1916.

MEXICO CITY.—It is reported that Gen. Pershing's American forces are retiring north from Colonia Dublan. It is said that all the American troops will have left Mexico by July 17.

HAVANA.—The Ward liner Monterey, which was due here early this morning from Vera Cruz, has not been heard from since 11 o'clock July 3. Uneasiness is felt owing to the fact that a cyclone was raging in the Yucatan channel about the time the Monterey should have passed through. The Monterey is laden with refugees from Mexico.

WASHINGTON.—With the receipt today of a pacific and conciliatory note from Carranza, administration officials expressed confidence that war between the United States and Mexico is now a remote possibility. The informal mediation by the Latin American diplomats described in THE TRIBUNE this morning appears to be bearing fruit. President Wilson, in accordance with assurances given the envoys, is retiring Gen. Pershing's expedition toward the border. Gen. Carranza, in accordance with his promise to the pan-American republics, has returned a pacific answer to the President's ultimatum. Ambassador Naon of Argentina and his Latin American colleagues are now confident that with Mr. Wilson and Gen. Carranza both having made concessions it will be possible to find a ground on which a complete agreement between the two governments can be based.

PARIS.—The Thiaumont work, around which some of the bloodiest fighting of the war has taken place, has been captured by the Germans for the fourth time, the French war office statement says. Heavy fighting continued last night on the Verdun front. The Germans made six successive attacks northwest of Thiaumont work, from which they were driven by the French recently a few hours after they had carried it. Last night's attacks were repulsed, the Germans sustaining considerable losses. Southeast of Fumin wood the French made slight progress.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex.—The fighting 1st Illinois cavalry is on the border. The first section of the regiment, under Col. Milton J. Foreman, reached Brownsville at 11:30 o'clock this morning, the section under Maj. R. R. McCormick two hours later, and the third section under Lieut. Col. Wallace Whigham at 3:30.

LONDON.—Russian cavalry patrols have advanced from Kimpolung, in southern Bukowina, over the passes of the Carpathians into Hungary, according to a wireless dispatch from Bucharest. The patrols made their way over the passes from Bukowina down into Hungary on July 4. The raiders blew up buildings containing stores of food and ammunition. A sensation was created in Budapest, the capital of Hungary, by the news that the invaders are actually on Hungarian soil.

CHICAGO.—Early reports indicate that Chicago had fewer accidents yesterday than at any Fourth of July on record. Up to a late hour only six accidents were reported, all of a more or less minor nature. Fifty thousand people assembled on the Municipal pier, although it will not be entirely ready for the public until July 15.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

What principles underlie the production of electricity on a commercial scale?

C. S.

YESTERDAY'S QUESTION.

What are the most important practical properties of electricity?

ANSWER.

Electricity can be most simply produced by rubbing different bodies together. By touching the bodies that have been rubbed separately to light balls hung from silk threads, it is found that two different kinds of electricity always occur. We call these kinds positive and negative for want of a better name. Whenever one kind appears the other always appears somewhere else in equal amount.

Electricity can be conducted from one place to another by substances called conductors. Metals and solutions of acids and salts are the commonest forms of conductors.

The flow of electricity through a conductor is called the electric current and electricity in motion like this possesses new properties not exhibited by electricity at rest [static electricity].

These new properties are magnetic effects. A current in a wire will swing a magnetic compass into a position at right angles to the plane that passes through the wire and the position of the magnet.

Nearly all common forms of electrical measuring instruments and all electric motors function because of these reactions between currents and magnet.

ABOUT A JANITOR.

Chicago, June 28.—My brother and I are joint owners of a remodeled 3 apartment building in Rogers Park. Four small apartments are furnished. We occupy the first floor. The tenant of a small basement flat helps with the building and his wife takes care of the furnished apartments. For nine years this arrangement has been carried on, and there has been no janitor in the building.

Now, when rents are down and taxes are up, the janitors' business agent demands that we evict our basement tenant and install a union janitor. We cannot afford a janitor. We do not need one. If our basement tenant were to move out we still would need no janitor, as the two men in the family could handle the situation nicely. We maintain this is not a union building and we protest interference by the union.

The janitors' union does not care whether we are able to pay our taxes and interest. Their only concern is to get a job for some janitor or other. In trying to accomplish this they would put out on the street a man with a family whose income is so meager he would have to apply for charity if he were evicted from this place.

Only two apartments are rented; yet, for the last three months a couple of husky pickets are spying on our building to keep us from getting deliveries of milk and other necessities. It does seem like rather petty business. They are trying to coerce us into hiring a union janitor whether we need one or not, but, since this is not Russia, we insist upon the freedom of our own holdings, and we refuse to be intimidated. We are wondering just how far the janitors' union will get with such tactics.

RUTH M. LAFFERRE.

POETRY.

Chicago, June 25.—Another Chicago institution, hardly less important than the Symphony orchestra or the Civic Opera, will be discontinued next fall unless financial help is forthcoming. Poetry: A Magazine of Verse, edited by Harriet Monroe, has brought distinction to Chicago for twenty years as the leading exponent of modern poetry in America, if not in the world. It has been consistently progressive, and the scores of poets whom it has introduced to the public are among the most significant and best known in modern English literature. Largely through the work of this magazine, Chicago gained the title several years ago of "the literary capital of America." It has been a center for creative work which, though quiet, in the long run brings more in value to this city than any number of larger and more expensive promotion projects.

Miss Harriet Monroe announced several months ago that Poetry would be discontinued next fall unless funds were forthcoming. She has said that she will be willing to continue as editor, but she feels that she can no longer spend her valuable time in raising money each year to support the magazine, and no one can blame her. Thus, in the year of the World's Fair, one of Chicago's most distinctive and creative institutions will be abandoned.

For a sum as low as $5,000 a year this magazine, which brought to Chicago world-wide recognition in the poetic arts, can be maintained. It would seem that even in this day of drastic cuts in budgets and expenses $5,000 should be available to save for Chicago so significant a part of America's cultural life.

BAKER BROWNELL.

STREET CAR STATISTICS.

Chicago, June 27.—Those suggesting a return of five cent fare on the Chicago Surface Lines will be interested in the following statistics appearing in the report for the year ended Jan. 31, 1932:

	1915.	1932.	Increase.
Total wages paid	$12,370,615	$29,230,208	136.19%
Taxes amounted to	1,439,279	3,015,000	109.48%
Net receipts	11,794,879	7,368,731
Rate of fare	5c	7c

Traffic for the year ended Jan. 31, 1932, was 18.08% greater than for 1915.

The recent 2 per cent reduction in wages, therefore, is only a small percentage of the decrease necessary in order to get back to pre-war basis. Undoubtedly the traction companies would be very glad to get back to 1915 levels in taxes, wages, fares and earnings.

CHARLES W. LORDELL.

THE PROTESTANTS OF IRELAND.

Chicago, June 30.—Your Irish correspondent has unwittingly done a grave injustice to a large and influential group when he described the Orangemen of Ireland as "the Irish Protestant" element. As truly might one describe the Knownothings or the modern Ku Klux Klan as "the American Protestant" element. Protestantism has nothing in common with Orangeism, nor with Ku Kluxism, both of which masquerade under the banner of Protestant zeal as a cloak for professional bigotry.

Republicanism in Ireland is of Protestant origin. All the great national leaders who sought separation from England were Protestants. Wolfe Tone, the Emmets, Lord Edward Fitzgerald, William Orr, the Brothers Sheares and a host of other Protestants led the insurrections of 1798 and 1803. In 1848 John Mitchel, Thomas Davis, John Martin and other Protestant republicans fought the loyalism of the O'Connells. In the Land league days Parnell and Joseph Biggar were the outstanding figures in Ireland, while in the U. S. A. the late George Dixon of Chicago and the Rev. Dr. Betts, Methodist minister of Philadelphia, were foremost among Irish republicans.

Orangeism and Ku Kluxism are synonymous. Irish republicans introduced both the Methodist and the Presbyterian churches to America. Nationality and religion are two separate and distinct things, having nothing in common either in Ireland or America.

REALIST.

IRISH LANDLORDS.

Chicago, July 1.—In today's TRIBUNE you have a short paragraph saying that the Irish Free State government has defaulted on the land annuities and that the British government intended to take measures to secure payments. You also state that the annuity payments were to repay English landlords for land purchased for Irish tenants.

I don't think this last statement is fair, as all the landlords bought out were Irishmen. No Scotchmen, Welshmen or Englishmen held land in Ireland. Of course, nearly all the landlords lived in Great Britain, but they were all Irish. John Redmond, the late leader of the Irish party in parliament, was one of the largest landlords and also charged the British people the largest sum per acre.

JOHN M. THOMSON.

FEDERAL AID.

Chicago, June 30.—How was it possible for one downtown bank to expeditiously secure $85,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance corporation at Washington when about one-fourth of this sum from the finance corporation, distributed in many banks, would have saved most of our outlying banking institutions?

RENEW BATTLE FOR SCHOOL TAX LEVY CUT TODAY

Buehler Will Demand a $15,000,000 Slash.

Minority members of the board of education are scheduled to renew their fight this afternoon for a $15,000,000 cut in the 1932 school tax levy. Trustee Ernst Buehler, leader in the economy drive, said yesterday that he would introduce at a special meeting of the committee of the whole resolutions to cut the levy from $75,000,000 to $60,000,000.

The board's 1932 levy appropriates $90,000,000, but not all of this comes from taxation. The tax levy ordinance now pending before the city council calls for $76,398,918.

Buehler Proposes Cuts.

One of Mr. Buehler's resolutions asks that the 1932 educational fund of $51,143,006 be decreased by $5,000,000. Two alternative resolutions deal with the building fund. He will ask either that the 1931 building fund appropriation of $21,172,938 be reduced by $10,000,000, or, failing this, that $10,000,000 be cut from the 1932 building fund appropriation of $15,514,707. Because the 1931 tax levy has not yet been spread the board can decrease the building fund appropriation, he said.

Earlier demands for these reductions were met by opposition from the holdover majority of the board, led by Trustee James A. Hemingway. "I am for safeguarding the welfare of the school children rather than the interest of the taxpayers," he said.

Savage Asks for Change.

Howard P. Savage, business manager, is expected to offer a recommendation today that the real estate bureau be placed under the direction of the auditor, as suggested by the Strayer report. William J. Sheehan will be retained to direct the bureau, it was said, if the recommendation is adopted.

DRY LAW FIRST SUBJECT FOR U. S. FURNITURE MEN

Dealers Coming Today for 17th Style Show.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

COL. REEVES.

Several thousand furniture dealers from all parts of the country will flock into the American Furniture mart on Lake Shore drive during the next two weeks, starting this morning, for the seventeenth semi-annual furniture style show. Most of these merchants will attend a dinner tomorrow night at the mart, at which prohibition and its influence, past and present, on their business will be the first subject for discussion.

Col. Ira L. Reeves, leader of the Crusaders, will analyze the subject especially from the perspective of the platforms adopted in Chicago by both major political parties, and what may be anticipated in the event of either a Republican or a Democratic victory in November. His talk will be followed by an open forum. Maj. Norman Allan Imrie will be toastmaster.

Industry at Crossroads.

Particular importance is ascribed to the present furniture market here, because leaders of the merchants have expressed conviction that the industry is at the crossroads. No effort will be spared to start it on the upgrade during the next two weeks, special emphasis being placed on methods of improving business, as well as on the new features of the displays.

Three points of the current showing are credited with attracting the large attendance anticipated, namely, the extent of the exhibits, the tremendous diversification of products included, and the ideas obtainable to stimulate sales.

Trends of the market, according to furniture officials, are away from the lowest prices and toward values that will permit them talking points to close sales. The purchaser has revolted against products built merely to sell at ridiculous prices, they believe, and now demand better materials, even though he must pay slightly more for them to obtain satisfaction. This has been especially true of card tables built to sell for a song and which now cannot be moved at any price, dealers report.

Styles Little Changed.

Styles have not altered much during the season but numerous minor features have been added to the staple lines to provide the talking features salesmen demand. This tendency will be reflected in furnishings slightly more elaborate, but not noticeably so, it was reported.

Georgian furniture continues to be the volume leader in sales. Early American continues popular although many cheap copies have been sold that somewhat reduced its standing. Early English, French Provincial, French Empire, Contemporary [moderne], and Queen Anne styles remain favorites, especially in higher priced brackets.

Smallest Baby in County Hospital Gains 2½ Ounces

As a manner of celebrating July 4th yesterday, Baby Marie Mason, 13 days old, the tiniest infant in the county hospital, added two and one-half ounces to her weight. She now tips the scales at 3 pounds 3½ ounces. At birth she weighed 3 pounds 15 ounces.

EDELSTEIN MAY ESCAPE JAIL IN SANITARY CASE

Defendant Before Court Today.

MARTIN EDELSTEIN.

Martin Edelstein, brother-in-law of the late Michael Rosenberg and of Mos Rosenberg, both Democratic leaders, is to appear before Chief Justice Harry Fisher in the Criminal court today to learn whether he is to be relieved of the three months' jail sentence imposed on him as one of the conspirators in the sanitary district graft case. Edelstein, who was the real estate agent of the district, was sentenced along with Timothy J. Crowe, former president of the board, and two others.

At the last hearing of the petition asking for the vindication of Edelstein, both the state's attorney's office and the judge indicated that "something should be done for Edelstein," but neither expressed a desire to accept the responsibility. The judge took the stand that the prosecutor should make a recommendation and the prosecutor replied, "It is all right with me if the judge wants to do something, but I cannot make a recommendation."

Not His Money in Bank.

Edelstein's attorney filed a petition saying that his client should be relieved of the sentence because the large bank account credited to Edelstein during the graft trial was not his money, but belonged to the late Michael Rosenberg and to political organizations.

Edelstein did not so testify at the trial. None of the defendants took the witness stand at the trial. The excuse offered for this was that the government at the time was investigating the bank account for income tax purposes. Edelstein's attorney says that the government has concluded its investigation and has given the defendant a clean bill of health. Assistant State's Attorney Harold Keele said he investigated these assertions and found them to be true.

Kelly Against Freedom.

Judge James J. Kelly, who was one of the three judges sitting en banc in the graft trial, however, indicated that he would not be satisfied to release Edelstein from the sentence until the defendant can show him some evidence as to why he should not be punished for using the public pay roll to pay for his household servants. The prosecution at the trial had testimony to show that servants in the Edelstein home were carried on the district pay rolls.

Kissane Pays Fine for Carrying Gun; Out of Jail

Anthony (Red) Kissane, west side hoodlum, obtained his release from the county jail yesterday when he paid his $300 fine, part of a sentence for gun toting imposed by Judge Daniel P. Trude. Kissane served the one year in jail and attempted to obtain relief from the additional fine by filing a pauper's writ, alleging that he had no money to make the payment. Judge Trude ruled that Kissane could either find a way to pay the fine or could serve it out in the jail at the rate of $1.50 per day. So Kissane paid.

WARN WOMEN TO BEWARE OF "HAIR" RACKET

Chicago women are warned in a bulletin of the Better Business bureau to beware the "free permanent wave racket." Numerous complaints have been received from women in all parts of the city and the bureau has started an investigation.

As she comes out of a store or theater, it is explained, a woman is asked to sign a card entitling her to a chance on a free permanent wave. Days later the solicitor calls with information that she has won, but that verification of her ticket will require a fee of fifty cents "to cover advertising cost." After paying the "fee" the victim discovers that the establishment sponsoring the plan makes a charge of several dollars for "services," which is actually the price of the wave.

Luckies "make no bones" about this vital question

"KEEP that under your hat," said the cigarette trade when first we raised the question—"Do you inhale?"

But silence is golden only when it's unwise to speak. Let others explain their striking avoidance of this subject. Lucky Strike makes its position crystal clear . . . for certainly, inhaling is most important to every smoker.

For everybody inhales—whether they realize it or not . . . every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette.

Do you inhale? Lucky Strike "makes no bones" about this vital question because certain impurities concealed in even the finest, mildest tobacco are removed by Luckies' famous purifying process. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it!

Helen Carlisle Uses Puritans in New Novel

Gives Picture of Early American Scene.

"We Begin," by Helen Grace Carlisle. [Harrison Smith.] Published today.

HELEN GRACE CARLISLE, author of "Together Again," "See How They Run," and "Mother's Cry" (which received favorable attention and criticism from the critics and the reading public alike), has shifted her theme and her emphasis in "We Begin." Formerly concerned with modern characters in modern settings, she now turns to early America, America of the first part of the seventeenth century, and to the English Puritans, who were the first people in that century to look to American as the land of promise. "We Begin" is a chronicle of the beginnings of the Puritanism that is a part of the fabric of our civilization.

HELEN CARLISLE.

The central plot revolves around the Dexter family, who lived in England until the persecution. A brief history of the family is traced and in outline of the political and social background of England is presented so that the reader may receive some impression of the culture from which emerged Puritanism. John and his brother, Eleazar, love Anne Brewster. John, a good hearted but happy and pleasure loving man who fears God but loves living, wins Anne, who is subtly repelled by the fanatic religious zeal that periodically transforms the elder brother into a madman. John and Anne marry and, when the persecutions begin, are forced unwillingly, through the malevolence of the brother, into exile in Holland. There, for a decade, they live and suffer for their faith. Finally Anne, with her three children, Eleazar, and John, sails for America in the Mayflower. They undergo the privations and torments of outcasts without money. After many years they win in their struggle for a livelihood and for happiness.

The rest of the book is devoted to the adopted daughter of Anne. The Dexters found her on the Mayflower, a nameless and pitiful waif sent from London to America. She grows into a beautiful girl coveted by Eleazar and loved by Anne's son. The horrible tragedy that finally rids the family of their malignant destiny in the form of Eleazar reveals him to be a victim of a lust that is even more terrifying than his religious insanity and inexplicably interwoven with it.

This book is more than an epic of early America. Though superficial observation would lead the reader to think of "We Begin" solely as a study and a delineation of Puritanism, closer scrutiny shows that this book is also a study in character that in power and in unevenness is comparable if not equal to "Wuthering Heights." The reader is many times convinced that it would be simply impossible for any one like Eleazar to be alive on this earth, and yet the lasting impression is one of his reality. He seems in one sense to be a figment of the imagination pure and simple, in another the essence of a Puritanism that is deeply rooted in the American nation, and in a third a person who could live in any age and in any country.

It is with considerable relief that the reader is unaware of any Freudian psychology used to explain Eleazar's character. If the author had applied Freud's theories the result would have been disastrous, because the tone of the book is beautifully consistent with the temper of the times when Freud was still undreamed of.

The structure of "We Begin" is laid on the diary form. Once in a while, at the beginning and at the end conspicuously, the author tells the story herself in direct, objective prose but throughout the rest of the book the characters reveal themselves, describe what they do and think, believe and feel, in the form the journal. The result is curiously effective and possesses the flavor of early eighteenth century and even biblical prose. In fact, each entry by the three main characters might be a song of gladness, adventure, love, misery, courage. Yet each entry is bare, simple, almost factual, stern, written in beautiful and almost completely unmannered prose.

Beyond the record of early American culture that is contained in this book (it is both a novel and a sound historical document), beyond the possible modern or universal interpretation of the characters, beyond all the technical merits and demerits of "We Begin," lies the author's initial intention—that of portraying the clash, eternal as it is, between good and evil, symbolized by the characters.

The author states that she is already at work on a sequel to carry on the story beyond the horrible climax and into the growing and awakening revolt of David, Anne's young son, another generation, against the precepts and practices of Puritanism. M. D.

Flowing, Graceful Skirt Last Word in French Chic

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Paris, in the midseason style shows, demonstrates that she is tired of the narrow, slinky silhouette for evening. The newest and the smartest line for evening is one that is ample, at least below the belt that marks the normal waistline. Around the town one still sees the narrow-skirted evening frock, but it is the opinion of the experts here that its days are numbered.

Skirts, and even bodices, that are flowing and Greek in their lines are the last word in evening chic. Louise boulanger is having a succes fou with her evening dresses along these lines, one of which is shown in the accompanying sketch.

It is dress is made of a woolen material called mousilmousse, a stuff as thin as chiffon, and one that falls in graceful folds. It is pale blue in color, and the only trimming is a girdle of silver and a necklace of silver around the round, daytime neckline.

The bodice of this frock is just like one for afternoon, with the exception of its sleevelessness. It is draped à la Grecque in front and is plain and high in the back. The skirt has its fullness concentrated at the sides, though it is not flat in front and back. It is at least five yards wide around the bottom and commences to flare from the normal waistline. Keep this silhouette in mind, girls: it has a future.

Drop Annual Poll of White Horses, Red Headed Women

New York, July 4.—(AP)—The annual poll of the number of red headed women and white horses in New York City has been cast into the discard. Neither the red heads nor the horses had anything to do with it.

The count flourished for years around that doubtful piece of folklore, sacred alike to the village postoffice and the metropolitan drug store, that there were precisely as man titian-tressed girls in a given community as there were albino horses.

The Fortieth Street Browning society abandoned the custom when it was found that the yearly tabulation was costing $16.85 in taxicab fares and there were no returns. The time was when the society could line up many a bet and use the proceeds for research in early Browning manuscripts.

But when the committee gathered to scan the passing tide, John Bleeck ended discussion of a count with a simple question:

"What's the use of counting red headed women and white horses in an age when red hair comes out of a bottle and white horses are scarcer than Lady Godiva?"

A Foundation Garment Can Be a Cool One

Fashions Require Proper Silhouette.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

IT takes a brave friend to talk to you about your figure, especially if the friendly hint is suggestive of a criticism, but some of us must try the patience of a lot of fashion wise shoppers who know how inexcusable it is to let your slim silhouettes stray out of reasonable bounds when good slim curves can be maintained with restraining garments.

So many things can be said about correct foundation garments and yet little is done about listening and heeding good constructive hints.

Why we seemingly grow weary of fighting extra layers of flesh in the summer time . . . why we cast caution aside and slump during the warm weather when then, if ever, we should hustle about trying and doing everything to keep slim and straight, is an unsolved mystery.

Everything has been done in the way of cool and airy materials for summer corsets and corselettes . . . the shops are full of some of the trickiest open meshed models that any fastidious shopper could want.

A new all-in-one model made of flesh toned net is a cool success . . . slip into this efficient all-together and you'll probably be cooler than if you parked everything, besides you'll be better to look at and be greatly delighted with the firm and well controlled silhouette that is reflected in your mirror.

This net creation has few but snugly important bones that control the extra rolls and bulges and a wide ruffle around the edges makes them shadow proof.

Other new models are made of delightfully porous elastic . . . an elastic, specially invented by some understanding genius, so that it stays anchored despite all the twisting and athletics you perform during the day . . . a two way stretch affair that threatens to do away with the "great American feminine gesture" for keeps. Once in place, you can wiggle and copy the pet tricks of the most agile contortionist and the sticky little garment always stays right where you need it.

You've been warned about these new form fitting frocks and gowns, and unless you're blind you have been seeing some rather sad examples of what the smartest kind of a frock will look like when it wrinkles and wobbles over an unrestrained silhouette.

Watch your bulges with an eagle eye—or better yet, invest in these summer models, these net, voile, and cotton mesh foundation garments that are priced so mercifully low that you can easily buy a new one every week and not be a spendthrift.

In a very short time you can be among the first to grab the new non-slipping shoulder strapped brassieres . . . the most ingenious invention that any frantic shoulder strap retriever ever dreamed about . . . a halter-like arrangement of an elastic strap slips through a tiny flat slide that also accommodates a cross back strap . . . the two slide in unison and it has been proved that the hours of shoulder straps that slide off into space are numbered. Active and not so active females are going to whoop with joy at this blissful prospect.

County's Summer Camp to Be Opened Near Palatine Today

Four hundred and thirty-five mothers and children will leave the North Western station at 12:15 o'clock today for Camp Reinberg, the summer vacation camp for underprivileged children and mothers in the Deer Grove forest preserve near Palatine.

It will be the first of six contingents of mothers and children, each of which will spend ten days at the camp, which is operated under the direct supervision of the county board of public welfare. Recreational directors and Boy Scouts will guide the children's play.

Funds for operating the camp this year, for which no appropriation was set up in 1932 budget by the county board because of limited resources, were obtained from other sources by the county commissioners. About $13,500 will be used this year, instead of the usual $17,000. Of that sum $7,500 was assured by the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, $4,500 was transferred from the county bureau of public welfare's unallocated funds and $1,500 was to be taken from the forest preserve funds by the county commissioners.

Good Morning!

Laughing with tears in your eyes! That'll be you as you watch "Make Me a Star" unreel.

The simply screen-told story of the small town grocery clerk who wins a correspondence school diploma in acting and trustfully descends on Hollywood to become a star in "serious productions" that will "make people happier" pulls all the wires that connect with us where we live.

"Make Me a Star" is the talking version of Harry Leon Wilson's novel, "Merton of the Movies," which was made as a "silent" way back in 1924. At that time Glenn Hunter impersonated the dreaming, dogged, humorless lad who worshiped at the shrine of a dashing hero of "westerns," practised riding and roping in the back yard of his village boarding house, had "stills" taken of himself in various ludicrous poses and costumes that he thought marvelous, and finally won the diploma which decided him to go and be even as was his glamorous idol.

Hollywood!

What price Merton Gill's ambition, zeal, belief in a high calling?

That, the picture shall show you through the combined efforts of one fine cast headed by the wistful young comedian who looks so much like Will Rogers.

Stuart Erwin is a lovable and unusual personality. His work is invariably intuitive and sincere, no matter how hampered he may be by story or direction. This trip he has help on all sides, and gives a performance that should rate him for stardom—in films that can offer roles on the order of "Merton."

Joan Blondell, in the part that Viola Dana played, is as honest, appealing, and intuitive in her breezy style as Erwin is in his, and makes the lad a perfect teammate as the Hollywood damsel who knows the ropes and takes under her wing the innocent from the sticks.

Sam Hardy is splendid as the slapstick comedy director who features the earnest tyro in a burlesque that the latter believes to be a straight feature until a certain heartbreaking preview where, at last, he sees himself as others see him. [Have the hanky ready at this point.] Other roles are played with sense and feeling. Charles Sellon is the only player who had a part in the former version. Here, as originally, he portrays effectively, the owner of the store where Merton clerks at the beginning of the picture.

For the layman this movie provides some worthwhile inside information what goes on at studio lots and it SHOULD dissuade a great many earnest young people from deserting the fireside for the singeing glow of Hollywood Klieg lights.

There's genuineness about the dialogue as well as the acting.

Sterling entertainment! That's—"Make Me a Star."

On the stage—Thurston, the magician. Baffling as ever! Take the youngsters.

See you soon!

Glorious 4th Is Celebrated at Algonquin

Three Hundred Children Enjoy Day.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Three hundred deliriously happy youngsters celebrated the Fourth of July at Camp Algonquin yesterday. It was one place in Chicagoland where life was complete and beautiful.

If you haven't licked an ice cream cone into oblivion during the last few years, or if you're too old to remember bouncing gay rubber balloons off your pal's head with shrieks of delight, and what it's like to get your first boat ride on a river, then you can't quite understand what a socially successful episode the Fourth was to the boys and girls at the camp. If you're prosperous enough to boast a tinge of dyspepsia you can't realize how soul satisfying was the square meal everybody stowed away at noon, after hours of romping in the sun.

It wasn't a special dinner for the occasion, even though the camp had honored guests. The menu for every day is apt to be pretty similar to the one for yesterday, with veal, and potatoes, and plenty of side vegetables; with bread and butter and a piece of candy to top of the dessert course.

But the big feature of the day was the regatta on the river in the afternoon, when with quite a little ceremony, four new boats were added to the fleet that now numbers nine. A. E. Jessurun of A. E. Jessurun & Co., donor of two of the four, made the presentation speech down under the big willow on the river bank, where everybody was gathered around. Mr. Jessurun spoke also for Ray Railton of B. A. Railton & Co., who gave the other two boats, in assuring the children of his happiness in helping them enjoy themselves.

Then the four were christened, two being named for Jackie and Barr McCutcheon, children of Mr. and Mrs. John McCutcheon and old friends of Mr. Jessurun, all of whom were in attendance; and Barbara Jean and John Douglas for the grandchildren of Mr. Railton, who also were present.

Thereafter the new acquisitions were put into action immediately, and everybody went for a row. Back again under the big willow tree, the ice cream cones and balloons were passed out, having been provided by James McKay and John De Lancey of Algonquin, and the Cities Ice Cream company of Elgin.

Dark had hardly crept over the camp when the children and their mothers, numbering a hundred more, were marshalled once more on the river bank, and the glorious Fourth was ended with the soaring of rockets and Roman candles, the popping of firecrackers and the rainbow glare of the set pieces donated by the Thearle fireworks company of Chicago. The display is an annual one of several years through the courtesy of the pyrotechnic company, with the children protected by having the fireworks pointed out over the river away from them and reflected in the water.

Large Throng Attends Races at Arlington

BY JUDITH CASS.

WARM, bright sunlight and cool breezes helped to make the Fourth of July a perfect holiday for the hundreds of fashionable racing fans who crowded the clubhouse boxes and the terraces of the adjoining Post and Paddock club at Arlington yesterday afternoon.

The smart racing center, which grows more beautiful year by year as its sponsors add to their plans for making it one of the finest tracks in the world, never looked more attractive than it did to yesterday's holiday throngs. Red gardenias blazed out above pale white petunias in rows around the clubhouse boxes. Over on the terrace of the Post and Paddock club the rose bushes planted last year by the late beloved Mrs. Charles W. Hubbard trembled in the light breeze. The flowers, known as the Seven Sisters roses, because they grow mostly in clusters of seven, are blooming in great profusion this year—a delicate memorial to the landscaping genius of the woman who planted them and a constant reminder of her work to her friends at Arlington.

Honore Palmers Have a Party.

The Honore Palmers, whose party included the young Potter d'Orsay Palmers, Honore Palmer Jr., and Miss Barbara Poole, were among the few who arrived at the Post and Paddock club in time to see the first race. During most of the afternoon they observed the races from the club terrace, leaving their places under a huge parasol only for short intervals when they walked down to see the horses in the paddock.

Mrs. Palmer wore a tailored navy blue tweed suit with a bright yellow scarf and a stiff blue felt beret. Her daughter-in-law wore a white plaited skirt, a black sweater striped horizontally about the shoulders in white, red, and green, and a black beret. Miss Poole wore a summery looking dress of pale yellow chiffon with rows of fagotting on the bodice and wide sleeves, and a black straw hat with a drooping brim.

Among those who sat on the upper terrace, with their legs dangling over the roof of the veranda, were Mrs. Howard Linn, a vivid splash of color in a jade green frock and an orange and black turban; Mr. and Mrs. Austin H. Niblack, the latter wearing a simple short sleeved white sports dress and a large white straw hat; young Tommy Leiter, Miss Dorothy Marshall, in a blue and white print frock and white turban, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Fleming.

Miss Libby Chase, wearing a yellow tweed suit and a brown turban, was everywhere with the moving picture camera with which she makes films of her friends for a smart movie magazine. After getting everybody in the Post and Paddock to pose for her the courageous young woman went down to the judges' stand to catch the finish of the big race along with the newspaper camera men.

Guests with Laurance Armours.

The Laurance Armours brought their house guests, the William H. Hitts and Joseph T. Ryerson of Washington, to the track after luncheon at their Lake Forest house. Mrs. David Lawrence of Washington was with the John Hertzes and their daughter, Miss Helen Hertz. Mrs. Robert V. McKim of New York and her brother, A. C. Bostwick, owner of the famous Mate, were in the James Simpsons' box with Mr. Simpson and the junior James Simpsons.

Mrs. Gustavus F. Swift and Mrs. Charles Edward Brown were together most of the afternoon and spent a great deal of the time on the grass in front of the clubhouse and down at the rail. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph R. Richardson, Miss Frances Weary, Mr. and Mrs. John Kellogg and their daughter, Miss Betty Kellogg, were among others who stood at the rail while the races were on.

Up in the clubhouse boxes were Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. McCulloch, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wright, who are among the most frequent attendants at the track; Mr. and Mrs. Weymouth Kirkland, Mr. and Mrs. Roy D. Keehn, Mr. and Mrs. Britton I. Budd, Mrs. Benjamin H. Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Hurley, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Taylor, Leeds Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Collins of Lexington, Ky., owners of Don Leon; Mr. and Mrs. Otto Lehmann, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Florsheim, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Templeton, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mulford, Mrs. Vincent Bendix and her sister, Miss Letitia Channon, Miss Constance Hasler, and Miss Beatrice Kirk.

Margaret Carter Is Engaged.

The following announcement is of interest to the numerous Chicago friends of both the prospective bride and bridegroom:

"Mr. and Mrs. William Northrop Carter of Joliet announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Bruce, to Boyd Nixon Everett of New York City, son of Mr. and Mrs. Torrey Everett of Pasadena."

The news was made known in a unique manner last evening at a party given at Diamond K ranch, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Woodruff in Joliet. A package bearing the written announcement was dropped from an airplane while the guests were assembling on the lawn for dinner.

Miss Carter prepared for college at Rosemary Hall, in Greenwich, Conn., and after one year at Northwestern university, where she became a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, she entered Smith college and was graduated with the class of 1931. Mr. Everett attended the Thatcher school and Phillips Exeter before entering Harvard, where he was graduated in 1926. He is now associated with the City Bank Farmers Trust company in New York.

Lake Geneva, that popular resort where so many Chicago families spend the summer, was the scene of much informal entertaining over the Fourth

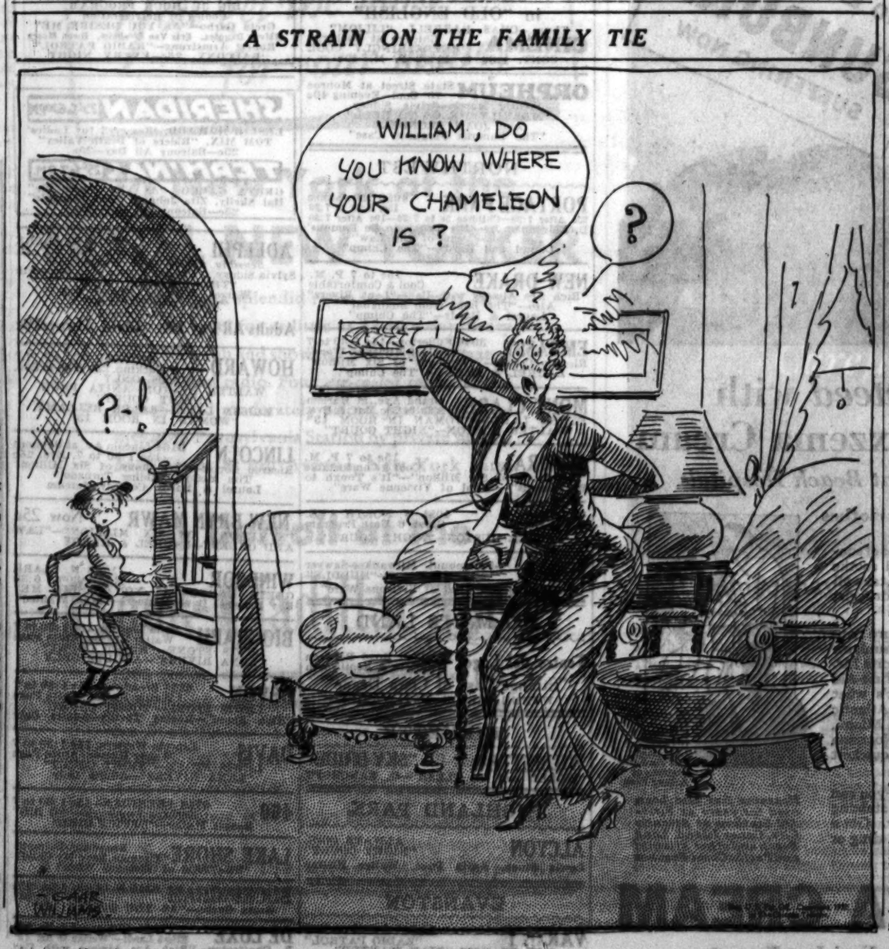
A STRAIN ON THE FAMILY TIE



I Like You So Much

BY MAY EDGINTON

SYNOPSIS.

Gold Franklyn calls Dr. Elverton, who has a surgery in a poor district of London, to attend her indolent young half brother. The doctor offers to give Barney Pierce, a well-to-do accident victim, a lift to his destination, and Pierce waits while the doctor makes his call. He catches a glimpse of the pretty young creature who summoned the doctor. Both men are impressed by the pluckiness of the orphan girl and take her troubles seriously to mind. The doctor is to sail the next week to New York and Havana on a leave, taking the ship doctor's place. Mrs. Doris Hathaway, a widow friend of Pierce's, is to sail on the same boat. She wants a maid-companion for the Atlantic crossing. Pierce calls on Doria, whose bills he has been paying for some months, to bid her adieu and farewell. Next morning the doctor calls on Gold. He tells her her brother should be made to stand on his own feet and sends her to see Mrs. Hathaway. Gold secures the job. Pierce regrets suggesting that Gold see Doria.

INSTALLMENT VIII.

A LAST MINUTE SAILING.

Unseen? Barney wanted to remain unseen? His lips twisted a little cynically, so that the woman who was lunching with him at the Ritz said:

"What are your unpleasant thoughts now, my dear man?"

Twice during the day he rang up Elverton's house, but he was out. Only later—surgery hour as Pierce remembered from his experience of yesterday—did he catch the doctor at home.

The tired clipped voice, a little rough: "Who is it? Pierce. O, yes. How's the hand? Your message of last night? O, yes. My silly cuckoo of an old housekeeper mislaid it and forgot it, and I've only just seen it on my desk. I note that you say——"

"Listen, doctor. You might let me have the girl's address. I didn't notice the street and number. Because I might be able to do something else for her——"

"Hold on. She's got the job. Mrs.—Mrs.—— Your friend's."

"Got it?"

"Went after it at nine this morning. Tremendously bucked. It'll do the child good. Sorry if you've any reason for not wanting——"

"All right, doctor. Good-night."

For a few moments Pierce stood reflective. His man came in and he turned sharply. "Get the shipping office if it's still open. Book me a suite in the Mercuria, sailing on Monday." And he said: "We may as well get back at once, after all."

. . . . . .

"What!" said Mrs. Hathaway, smiling astutely, "you know one of the ship's officers? I couldn't see the stripes on his sleeves—which was it?"

"It was the doctor."

Doria Hathaway looked with ready feminine curiosity at the clear white face of her traveling companion. They had traveled down in the boat train, no admirer having placed a car at her service, and the few attentive males who saw her off at the big London terminus being, very unsatisfactorily, of the paid dancing partner type. That she should come to a pass like that! "Well," she had thought practically, "I have paid men to dance with me in London. I had to be amused—and Barney has behaved like hell!" She had most of his check for three hundred pounds in her pocket—the damage done to the colliding cars the other day being slight after all, but she affirmed to herself with illogical anger that he had behaved like hell. However, in the same first class railway compartment—the Franklyn girl, of course, had been put in a third class carriage—there had been a large man of the rich business type who seemed, from his conversation with a friend on the platform, to have embarked upon this journey in an unexpected hurry; and he had been intrigued, she knew, by her rich colors of complexion and hair, her expensive traveling clothes and the whole perfume of her personality.

As they went up the gangway, Gold in front carrying her employer's jewel case, Doria had seen one of the ship's officers waiting there for some one in particular——

She had read his name on the label of a dispatch case he carried "David Dorrance."

At Southampton he had handed over to her the porter who came to him first, though she had smiled and protested: "Don't bother. My maid's here," and then wondered to herself if that was not an awkward appellation to fasten upon Gold Franklyn, who would probably be much in her company.

The girl was capable! No doubt of it! She had the passports ready and the luggage collected, everything necessary done in a flash. The swift, nervous energy of her! And yet quiet, contained, reined in. As they went up the gangway, Gold in front carrying her employer's jewel case, Doria had seen one of the ship's officers—who had the air of waiting there for some one in particular—smile and salute.

They were in Doria's big stateroom, which had its private bath. A few small flower boxes lay on her bed and one huge sheaf of roses together with a gilt basket of fruit at which she dashed, asking meanwhile her question: "Which was it?"—and then, "The doctor? Where did you meet him?"

"In London. He was that doctor I told you of, who attended a relative of mine, and told me about your post."

"You saw him only once, and he did that!"

"Why not, Mrs. Hathaway?"

"Why not! Why not, says she! I say that was quick work! And I suppose you didn't know he was doing this cruise?"

"No."

"Of course, you knew," chaffed Doria, passing from the moodiness of the rail journey into radiant spirits at sight of the flower boxes. "I'll say you're clever—cleverer than I thought at first. Well, I don't mind how clever you are. The right kind of cleverness puts a girl anywhere, though," she added frankly, sighing, "it mayn't keep her there. Look at me."

"But you're a wonderful example."

"My good girl, I'm broke. Well, truly, and always!" She had extracted a card from an envelope and now read it eagerly. "Look, aren't those roses beautiful? Look at that basket of fruit! They're from the richest man I know, Barney Pierce. He's crazy about me! Just crazy! Ring and tell the stewardess I must have plenty of vases at once; and then arrange the flowers, dear." She was delighted and smiling, tugging at the string of the lesser boxes. Her brown eyes were warm. So Barney wanted her to remember him?

"The sap!" she said frankly, with a gleaming laugh. "He ought to have come over on this boat. Crazy about me!"

The stewardess came, demurring a little about the difficulty of finding vases in the first rush of sailing, but was defeated by Doria's exuberant insistence. And Doria talked restlessly: "We're moving! I must go up and see things! You put those flowers in nicely, Miss Franklyn. And then you go along and find your own quarters and I expect you'll want to see to your things. Come back when it's time for me to dress for dinner—say seven."

"Do I dine with you?" Gold asked.

Doria considered. "Yes. Tonight, anyway. I'll arrange it. Afterward we'll see." She was gone like a warm wind.

She went quickly up the companion, not noting who stood in the melée 'round the purser's desk. Therefore she missed seeing Barney Pierce in a rough tweed traveling coat, looking through a passenger list, and finding Gold Franklyn's name, and noting, with his knowledge of ships that her cabin would be one of the meanest on the lowest deck; and saying to himself: "That's like Doria. The alloy—the mean streak; that all women have."

Doria Hathaway walked exuberantly onto the promenade deck. She was always thrilled to be moving off, to be going somewhere, although perhaps, she knew—if she would have allowed herself to know—that what she wanted was what most women want— safety, happiness; a strong, stable quality in life that so far she had missed. Now she went to the ship's side and saw her drawn out gently seaward by the miracle of maneuvering little tugs. But though her eyes seemed on the sunlit sea and the green shores from which they were receding, most of her attention was for the life of the ship about her. She knew when a blue uniformed figure stood near her; she let him stand thus for quite a minute, then she turned and glanced into Elverton's lined, quizzical face.

She let her eyes fall examiningly to the braid on his sleeve as if she did not know already that this was the ship's doctor who had saluted as she and Gold came aboard. Now he saluted again, and smiled, his wise eyes on her face, and fairly sure of his reception.

"Good-day," he said formally. "Mrs. Hathaway?"

"Yes?" She made herself sound formal, too, though as far as she was concerned it was never too soon for amusement, for flirtation, to begin.

"I hope you are comfortable in your stateroom."

"O, I have a lovely room."

"My name is Elverton. At your service." Doria was shrewd enough to think: "At mine, or at that girl's?" before his next words dispelled the unpleasing doubt.

From a Fiance to Friendship Is a Letdown

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"The irony of it!" cries "Puzzled." "His freedom means more to him than my love."

Yes, the boy friend begs Puzzled to release him from their understanding. The understanding being that marriage would take place as soon as a little money was saved. He says he still loves her—but would much prefer that they be only friends. And Puzzled asks: "Should I be just a friend or try and forget him?"

When you're nineteen, that is a painful alternative to be confronted with. The transition from love's hopeful dream to mere friendship is a letdown hard to take, isn't it? On the other hand, just because you're nineteen the revelation that love can degenerate into something less than the burning sensation is cheering. There is so much time ahead for recuperation and a new lease on the cardiac action. In other words, Puzzled, it isn't nearly the tragedy it appears on the face of things. Probably the proverbial blessing hiding in the folds of the dark cloud.

If there isn't any money in sight for an early marriage, freedom is what the boy should be granted.

But about swapping love for friendship—that's just one of those things that make a better alibi than a companionable working arrangement. If you were older and had gathered a wiser philosophy of life, the friendship substitute might be compromised with. But at nineteen you probably would be wanting to attach love importance to every friendly meeting.

You would suffer pangs of jealousy should the boy appear to admire another girl, which would be his right. You would want him for your escort. In fact, you'd probably want him to perform the duties of the lover instead of giving him the free reins of a friend.

So, altogether it would appear to be the wiser stand to let the boy slip out of your life gracefully and keep your weather eye open for a suitor substitute. This course of procedure saves you time, morbid fancying, and is all round better guaranteed to preserve the sweetness of your disposition.

Bright Sayings of the Children

My son and his cousin, both aged 5, were talking confidentially. My nephew turned to my son and said: "I know more than you do, but I can't think just what it is."

Buddy came to his mother the other day with a troubled face. "Momsy," he said, "I should think if I'm made of dust, I'd get muddy inside when I drink water."

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Clothing Needed.

"I have been our of work for two years, and my family is badly in need of clothing. If you can get something for my children, a boy 5 years and a girl 18 months old, a suit, size 3S, and a pair of shoes, size 8, for me, it would help so much. D. D."

It has been so long since most of the people coming to me these days have worked, and consequently so long since they've had any new clothing, that the need is really a desperate one. If you have any at all to give, it will be greatly appreciated.

There're Value and Dignity to Manual Work

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

There's a true story I want to tell you and the pity of it is that I can't give names because they would give it "punch."

A woman I know, while in England, went to visit at the country house of an internationally known, brilliant, titled English woman—at least she seems essentially English now, though she was born an American.

The guest was escorted to her rooms, and, after the maid had left, her hostess lingered a moment to be sure with truly hospitable feeling that her guest was comfortable. She glanced around the bedroom and the bathroom—then groaned, half in impatience, half humorously.

"Just LOOK at that tub! It's impossible to get maids that you can depend on to clean a tub properly."

And with that she impetuously grabbed a face cloth and a cake of soap and vigorously scrubbed the tub clean!

I like that. Do you? There was a woman with a houseful of servants, not afraid to use her hands. It sounds as if she had a well-balanced wholesome personality—which as a matter of fact she has.

It is an asset to a human being of any age to be able to use his hands well. Every child should have the opportunity to gain manual control and skill in a variety of ways. Many parents and many schools realize this—but many do not.

of July week-end. There were numerous house parties at the large estates, but no large affairs were given in celebration of the holiday. The Country club had no special parties, not even the customary dinner dance, but the golf links and tennis courts were crowded.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Peterkin, who have one of the loveliest of the estates along the Lake drive, had Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Woodland of Kenilworth and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel P. Trude as their house guests. Mrs. Aldis B. Hatch and her son, Aldis Jr., were guests of Col. and Mrs. William Nelson Pelouze. The Hatches left yesterday for Hinsdale and her son departed for Desbarat to visit Judge Clarence Norton Goodwin.

Dr. and Mrs. William P. Finney and their children arrived at Lake Geneva on Thursday to spend the summer at the Knoll. Dr. George A. Thompson was a week-end guest at the A. F. Gartz residence.

No one knew that Mrs. Charles G. Glore had returned from Europe until she appeared at Arlington on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Glore sailed for France a month ago to bring her daughter, Miss Nancy Glore, back from school.

Guests at Army Tournament.

Mrs. Edward Hines, Gov. and Mrs. Emmerson, Gen. Thomas S. Hammond, Thomas R. Gowenlock, and the Italian consul general, Giuseppe Castruccio, were guests of Gen. and Mrs. Frank Parker last night at the military tournament.

Miss Betty Dixon has returned from the east, where she spent the winter pursuing her theatrical ambition and is with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Homer L. Dixon of 2410 Lake View avenue, and her sisters and brother for the summer. The family has no summer plans except for occasional week-end visits away from the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus G. Hill and their three little girls left Saturday to spend the balance of the summer at Mackinac island.

The Chicago Woman's club civic forum group will hold a program tomorrow at which Mrs. Jacob Baur and Mrs. George Bass will discuss "What Every One Doesn't Know About Political Conventions."

The program is one of a series of summer meetings which the club is giving this season due to the fact that so many Chicagoans are spending the warm weather months at home.

Next week the summer activities committee will take club members by bus to Oakdale, where they will visit the reformatory for women near Dwight.

Mr. and Mrs. George Edward Levings of 7102 Sheridan road announce the birth of a daughter, Eugenia Huntley, on Friday, at the Edgewater hospital. Mrs. Levings, before her marriage in 1930, was Miss Susan Tarpley Dent of South Carolina. The new baby is a great-grand niece of Julia Dent Grant.

Dainty Fresh Look Is Valuable Charm Asset to Summertime Girl

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

How to avoid that wilted lettuce look is the great warm weather problem. How to keep from feeling it would be half the battle. Look or feel, it's no condition for a nice girl to be found in, now, is it?

You're going to need a lot of water, just like the garden rose, to keep from drooping. You have to be clean of girl and clean of clothes. You'll have to keep a good supply of soap on hand, for you can't rub off that hot weather soil with cold cream. The oil glands of your skin are working overtime and what they exude creates an oily surface that can only be handled properly with warm, sudsy bath water daily.

The shower is O. K. after the soapy attention, but believe, just to be on the safe side, that showers are no substitute for the regular scrubbing. They are the extras, as it were. Grand and highly recommended, but not quite enough.

Another thing the hot summer weather does, as you are well aware, is to increase the flow of perspiration. That calls for a good tubbing with the soap and brush trimmings. And the cold shower after. Two warm soapy baths are really better than one a day in hot weather, especially if there is the slightest tendency to oil or perspiration.

Do you know that if you add some baking soda to the water, you'll make the water alkaline and it is especially cleansing to the oily or perspiring skin. Then, there are the bath salts that set you up like daisies after a rain—the pine, lavender, verbena, and other odored preparations for bath use that are psychologically refreshing.

In one way, it is easier to be lovely in summer than at any other season. The dainty, lovely feminine colors make it so. And just because of this the person has to be fanatically clean and crisp and sweet of scent. Of course, you'll have your dusting powder and you'll use it after each bath. You know some of the dusting powders have deodorant properties. They're pleasant to use and recommended heartily as a hot weather safety measure.

Liver Recipes Topic of Food Expert Today

Appetizing Variations Will Please Family.

BY MARY MEADE.

If you have been watching the booms and slumps in the liver market in the last five years you've discovered that it doesn't take bears and bulls to upset prices and send them rocketing. The job can be done just as effectively by a few words from the family doctor.

Ten years ago liver was a nobody. It sold—if the butcher bothered with it at all—for a quarter a pound and women served it very little, as families in general objected to its distinctive flavor. And this was calf's liver. Beef and hog livers simply had no market at all.

Then some one made a discovery. Physicians and chemists proved that the lowly liver was extremely rich in iron in a form easily taken care of by our bodies. Anemia and tuberculosis, both of which had baffled science on all sides, were discovered to be greatly relieved by feeding liver and liver extracts to the patients. And since even the most husky of us were having difficulties in getting sufficient iron into our diets to insure good red blood and health, we, too, were advised to indulge in frequent servings of liver to guard against iron deficiencies.

But unfortunately calves still had just one liver apiece, and with the increased demand up went the prices, till at the height of the panic liver was quoted in some markets as high as $1.25 a pound!

Today, while calf's liver is priced at almost twice its old low, it has fallen back well within the reach of the modest budget, and beef and hog liver also, thanks to new methods of cookery and modern equipment for breaking tough fibers, are putting in their bids for supplying variety and health in the daily diet.

If you are not already blessed with a liver loving family then so much the better. It will be real sport to practice intrigue and camouflage in introducing liver each week until they cultivate a taste for it in spite of themselves. If they've met their liver so far fried and ushered in with bacon strips, try scalloped liver for a change. Or liver dumplings, liver custard, liver soup, or liver in stuffed potatoes, meat loaf, macaroni dishes, green peppers, or a mysterious goulash. This last number is a triumph in flavors if made properly. Here we have the recipe:

LIVER GOULASH.

Cut one-third pound of beef in one inch cubes, place in a saucepan with one pint of boiling water. Add one clove of garlic and let boil five minutes. Cook one-third pound of liver or kidney in boiling water until nearly done. Combine beef and liver and add two slices of onion cut up in small pieces. Pare one potato and cut up in three-fourths inch cubes. Cover with boiling salted water and let boil five minutes. Drain and add to meat fifteen minutes before serving time. Cream one tablespoon of butter and one tablespoon of flour together. Add one-half teaspoon of salt and a dash of pepper. Mix with some of the stock from the pan and then pour back into the pan. Stir constantly until mixture thickens. Serve very hot.

LIVER SOUFFLE.

1 teaspoon salt.
6 eggs, separated.
1½ cups milk.
2¼ cups finely ground liver.
Pepper to taste.

Make a white sauce from the fat, flour, milk, and seasonings. When thick stir in the beaten egg yolks and the liver. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and pile into a greased baking dish. Bake in a pan of hot water in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] about forty minutes, or until firm. Brown quickly under a flame. Serve immediately with a thin tomato sauce.

CREAMED LIVER.

Parboil sliced liver and cut in cubes. Sauté in butter in a frying pan. Season with salt, pepper, and a little chopped onion and stir in a sprinkling of flour. Add enough milk to make a thick, smooth sauce.

Sandwiches are a year round problem and delight, whether they're for school lunches or picnic baskets. Liver sandwiches make pleasant surprises and are quickly concocted. Blend finely ground cooked liver with piccalilli, finely minced onion, chopped parsley, and mayonnaise. Your own tastes will determine the proportions. Spread generously between buttered whole wheat slices.

LIVER CUSTARD.

Beat four eggs slightly and add one cup of ground cooked liver, two cups of milk, one teaspoon of salt, and one teaspoon of melted butter. Turn into a buttered mold and bake in a pan of hot water in a moderately slow oven [340 degrees F.] about thirty minutes or until firm.

More liver recipes—ten of them—for which we haven't room today will be sent to you on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Sally to Pick 100 to See Our Cubs Perform

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Have you written the letter that will win you an invitation to our baseball party at Wrigley field on Thursday, July 14? That's the day our Cubs will meet the Brooklyn Dodgers in terrific combat and one hundred of us will be right on hand to watch the battle.

Won't it be fun to see Hack Wilson again? He'll be back with the Dodgers on his old stamping ground, but he'll be tugging for the opposition. And we'll see Lou Warnecke, the hero of more than one close game this season. Perhaps he'll put on one of his famous spectacular performances for us that day. You saw how he snatched first place from Pittsburgh the other day.

Then there's Kiki Cuyler and Charlie Grimm, favorites of more than one of you, I'll wager. Won't you enjoy watching them perform—socking the old ball into the outfield, sliding into base, or giving us that special treat—a home run!

They're not slouchers on the Brooklyn team, either, and we can expect some competition. Have you seen the things Lefty O'Doul and Joe Stripp have been doing? Looking back over them I'd say we'll see a pretty good show.

That is, you will if you can write a winning letter—one that will make me see just how much of a baseball—and Cubs—fan you really are. You have only two days left in which to compose this letter because I must have it no later than Thursday morning. That's the day on which I shall read them and select the fifty boys and fifty girls who will accompany me to Wrigley field on the afternoon of July 14.

In writing, be sure that your name and address are plainly legible, do not omit your name, do not ask for an invitation for any one except yourself, and send your letter to Sally Joy Brown, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago.

Rare Samples of Lace Owned by Chicagoans

Noted Pieces Presented to Art Institute.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

Aristocrats among collectors—the lace gatherers! In Chicago they list among others the names of Palmer, Field, Chadbourne, and Allerton!

Masters of these houses may prefer to dote on a Titian or a Rembrandt, but for the feminine counterpart there is no greater pleasure than searching out a point d'Alençon that once trimmed a nobleman's nightshirt or a point de France that flounced a royal bathtub. This is the romantic trail of lace . . . from the ensemble of a Bourbon or a Hapsburg to the cabinet of a society matron, from the hem of an eighteenth century towel to a twentieth century museum.

Every piece . . . or at least every piece that has found a place in these collections . . . recalls a picture that its owner delights to paint . . . of the court of Louis XIV., where men wore lace cravats, trimmed their boots in lace, and cleaned their razors on lace cloths . . . or, perhaps, of the altar in an old world cathedral.

Any one of several Louis may have embellished his wardrobe with the handsome piece of real French Alençon in the collection assembled by Mrs. Emily Crane Chadbourne and presented to the Art institute about six years ago. It is a costly lace indeed . . . since each part is executed by a different workman, the piece having passed through as many as 18 different hands. The imagination can also wander royally over the 16th century edge of Italian reticella with figures many and varied dramatized into its pattern. Another part of the Chadbourne collection and a rare piece for any museum!

For early examples of Valenciennes, named after the little French town in which it is made, there is the collection of laces gathered by Mrs. S. W. Allerton and now owned by her stepson, Robert Allerton. The finest of these pieces are now housed in the institute; others Mr. Allerton has in his country home at Monticello. An 18th century flounce of point de France is part of the Potter Palmer collection gathered in large part by Chicago's former queen of society, the first Mrs. Palmer.

Flanders laces are represented by the handkerchief owned by Dr. D. D. Van der Grift and the court veil made in 1810 for Russian royalty, now in the possession of the Antiquarians. Into the veil's gossamer loveliness is woven the coat of arms of Russia's royal family.

But all of this use of lace nomenclature postulates a knowledge of lace history that any collector takes pride in relating. She likes to explain first, as she pulls out flounces and cloths, cuffs and collars, that every piece is either a needlepoint [made with a needle] or a pillow lace [made with bobbins on a pillow]. If her audience is receptive, she likes to go on and show with her costly specimens that needlepoint is easily distinguished by its loop or buttonhole stitch, while pillow lace presents a more linenlike or woven appearance . . . also that the earlier the laces the simpler and more geometric they are in their patterns.

Unless lace is to be found in the 3,000 year old meshed mummy coverings of Thebes or the robes of the Greeks and Romans, the decorative trail starts with 15th century Italy, marches on to France, then to Belgium, and across the channel to England. It is all a simple process of evolution, cutting away threads, more and more, until the whole pattern is liberated from its background. The Italians called this liberation "punto in aria," meaning in its literal translation "out of nothing."

Charlie Chaplin Turns Author for Magazine

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., July 4.—Charlie Chaplin can't be bothered about his next movie until he has finished his current stunt as an author. Charlie was followed to Paris by a woman representing a monthly magazine who sought his signature to a contract for a 50,000 word serial about the Chaplin career.

The trip to Paris was futile but the lady scout eventually signed Charlie and as soon as he got back to Hollywood from the Orient the magazine lady showed up again rushing here via plane from New York to stick Charlie's nose to the grindstone and see that he keeps at the writing job until completed. This proves that regardless of whether Charlie knows much about magazine writing the magazine lady knows Charlie and his habits.

Universal is negotiating with Henry B. Walthall for a long term contract. The "Little Colonel" is going through a revival of popularity recently appearing in "Police Court" for an independent, with Richard Bathlemess in "Cabin In The Cotton" and in the film version of "Strange Interlude."

When the Universal studio wanted to shoot a picture of a typical motion picture studio to represent the plant operated by the elephantine Glogauer in "Once in a Lifetime," a Universal camera crew drifted over to Burbank and made some shots of the exterior of the First National-Warner plant. And were the executives at Warner's burned up?

Under the resumed Sheehan régime at the Fox plant, George O'Brien seems likely to grow into a place of importance on the studio roster equal to that which was occupied by Tom Mix in the silent days. For a period of years Mix was the real ace of the entire Fox lot, the Mix cowboy pictures bringing in more box office money than any other combination of films Fox ever made with two or more stars. It was a day of red ink when Fox let Tom Mix get off its roster of stars, but George O'Brien as a wild west hero in the series of Zane Grey novels which he is picturizing is gradually lifting Fox back into the popular class among the horse opera followers. At present O'Brien is filming "Robbers' Roost."

Constance and Joan Bennett have been having a fine time entertaining their mother, Mrs. Eric Pinker, who was Adrienne Morrison, a famous actress in her time.

EQUIPOISE WINS ARLINGTON HANDICAP; 6TH IN ROW

TRED AVON 2D IN BATTLE OVER HOLDING TRACK

Victor Pays $2.68 Straight.

BY FRENCH LANE.

It was Equipoise by three-quarters of a length.

The "big horse" of American racing again showed 'em his flying heels in the Stars and Stripes handicap, worth $27,550, at Arlington Park yesterday afternoon.

It was the sixth time he has started this year. And it brought his sixth straight victory.

He had to be every inch a race horse to do it in the Stars and Stripes. For his five opponents in this mile and a furlong struggle let him know they were out to trim him from flag fall to the finish.

Tred Avon Second.

But Equipoise did it, just like any great champion would go about such a task. He carried his weight crusher of 129 pounds over the heavy holding track as gamely as any horse ever ran. He fought off his fleet running rivals one after another, and they paid off on him.

Tred Avon, a gray filly from Maryland, charged up on the champion in the final strides. But she could not head him and the holiday crowd of 25,000 came up with a mighty cheer for Equipoise as he went sailing past the winning post. In third place came old Dr. Freeland, five lengths behind the two leaders. The Nut was fourth, Paul Bunyan fifth, and floundering in the heavy going, beaten off, came Mate, the winner of last year's Classic.

Makes Good Time, Too.

Equipoise didn't shatter any world's records, for the track was deep in heavy mud. Yet he ran the mile and a furlong in 1:54 4-5 and could have done better if Jockey Sonny Workman hadn't let him take it easy all the way down the stretch. The quarter was run in :24 3-5, the half in :49 2-5, a remarkable early pace on such a track; the three quarters in 1:15, and the mile in 1:41 2-5.

The crowd profited, of course, when Equipoise triumphed. Not any long dividends, to be sure, but the champion rewarded his army of backers at $2.68 to win, $2.76 to place, and $2.60 to show. Tred Avon's place price was $3.86 and her show price was $2.94. Dr. Freeland's show price was $6.32.

Equipoise Is Nervous.

They were at the post for more than three minutes and the delay was caused by Equipoise. The big chestnut son of Pennant-Swinging was nervous from the time he entered the paddock. He showed more signs of nervousness as he entered the walking ring, where his owner, C. V. Whitney, and a party looked on as he was saddled. He was more nervous than ever when he reached the starting gate.

After the delay the start was good and it was The Nut which bounded out in front with Equipoise second and Dr. Freeland running third. But in a few more jumps Dr. Freeland had moved into second place. They had Equipoise in very tight quarters rounding the Post and Paddock club bend.

Workman skimmed through next to the rail with only inches of room to spare and heading into the back stretch shot Equipoise up on even terms with The Nut and Dr. Freeland. They ran that way until half way down the back stretch, when Equipoise's nose was showing in front.

Still Anybody's Race.

The crowd gave up its first great cheer when the champion chestnut's nose began to forge ahead.

He could not pull far away from The Nut and Dr. Freeland in the next furlong and they hit the lower bend and began to wheel around it only heads apart.

Then Equipoise put on the burst of speed for which he has been noted in all his great triumphs. He moved away from these that were trailing him in enormous stride. He flew into a lead of two lengths and at the head

Tough Luck Is Good Luck; Jobless German Wins Title

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BARMEN, Germany, July 4.—In this small manufacturing center in Rhenish Prussia, 27 miles northeast of Cologne in the picturesque valley of the Wupper, roofs on homes and factories need little repairing. There is no building, so Werner Spannagel is jobless.

Spannagel is the German amateur flyweight boxing champion. For more than a year he has been unemployed. But failure to find work at his trade—roofing—has not been without its rewards. It has given Spannagel, a 22 year old strong man for his weight, more time to train.

His Dream Comes True.

When elimination bouts were started to select the German champions and a team to compete in the International Golden Glove matches in Soldiers' field, Chicago, July 26, Spannagel was well qualified for the rigors of many hard tournament fights. In Berlin, 175 miles distant, his dream of Chicago became a reality, when he knocked out his last opponent.

"This is the greatest thing in my life, this trip to Chicago," he beamed. "I probably would never see America in all my life if I hadn't lost my job and had time to train. Can you imagine how it makes me feel to get the greatest fortune of my life just when I thought I was getting the greatest misfortune? I've never been on the water, but I don't think it can be any worse than some of the fights the other boys made me go through to win this trip."

Wins 56 in 70 Fights.

A quiet, unassuming, blond chap, Spannagel is as widely known for his drollery as for his fighting prowess. In the ring he is a cool, deliberate workman. His ability to remain calm in the heat of battle earned him the ringside sobriquet of "Eskimo" at the championship finals in Berlin. Newspaper men called him the "coldest man in the tourney."

He has had 70 fights, winning 56. Boxing is Werner is natural. His father was an amateur years ago, fighting in Barmen and Cologne. Herr Spannagel now is a switchman on the German National railroad and Barmen's most rabid boxing fan. Prior to the German National position, Herr Spannagel was a conductor on the elevated railway which connects Barmen with Elberfeld. This railway has overhead tracks from which the cars hang suspended.

"My father will be the proudest man in Germany if I cable him from Soldiers' field July 26 that I have licked Chicago's best flyweight," Werner said. "And I am sure I am going Cleveland Takes Opener, 4-2; Hose Second, 2-1.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Wes Ferrell, Cleveland's great right hander, yesterday became the majors' winningest pitcher when he beat the White Sox, 4 to 2, in the first game of a double header. But despite his record he wasn't as good a pitcher on the day's statistics, as our own Ted Lyons, who won the second game, 3 to 1, the one run being an unearned tally in the first inning.

Ferrell, who got his No. 15 victory while Lefty Gomez of the Yankees was failing to grab No. 15 for himself, shoved his win mark to the top of the column, though Gomez lost his second game yesterday while Wes has lost five in building up his splendid record.

Ferrell started out as if he were bent on pitching a perfect game, for the Sox did not get a runner on base until the fifth.

Gaston Pitches Well.

Gaston pitched a good game against Ferrell, but for the second time this year he was given the tough assignment of vying with the star and the kind of determined backing the Indians invariably give their hero.

Lyons' victory was only his third of the year, but it was none the less gratifying because the young man showed that physical misfortune has not overtaken him to the extent sometimes feared. He allowed only seven hits. The only innings in which Ted permitted the enemy to get more than one hit were the first and the ninth. These all were singles.

Kress, along with the entire Sox cast, played nice defensive baseball, and in the ninth Red's scintillating work probably averted a tie or defeat. And it was Red's triple in the sixth which drove in Fothergill with what proved to be the winning run.

FIRST GAME

The end of the fourth inning of the first game found the Indians in possession of one run and the Sox with a record of not having reached first base.

The Indians' No. 1 run was made by Porter, first man up in the first inning. The squirmy Indian got No. 24 of his series of doubles to start things off, then Burnett walked. Averill slowed down the rush somewhat by hitting into a double play, Gaston to Appling to Blue, Porter taking third, but Vosmik singled to left, scoring Porter. The inning ended when Vosmik was sunk trying to steal second.

In the fifth inning the Sox got tired of walking back to the bench. So Fothergill opened the inning with a double off the left center score board, thus becoming the first Chicagoan to get on base. Kress followed with a single over second and Fothergill came home with the tying run. Kress was out trying to steal second, then Blue singled to center to make it three hits in a row off Ferrell. Appling fouled to Morgan, after which Blue stole second. Berry was called out on strikes.

Porter Scores Again.

Porter also scored the second run for the Indians to give the team a lead that never disappeared. He started with a single, went to second on a fielder's choice, to third on a forceout, and scored between installments of a drawn out double play. The score was made after Funk's catch of Vosmik's fly and the double play was effected because Averill, who had been on first, became a little dizzy on the base lines and came to only to find himself slain in a play which was recorded Funk to Hayes to Blue.

The Indians brought the score to a 3 to 1 status in the seventh on Appling's poor throw after capturing Morgan's grounder, a single by Myatt, and Cissell's long fly.

Make Ferrell Bear Down.

In the eighth the Sox made Ferrell bear down a bit. Berry drew Ferrell's first pass with one down. Jones ran for Berry and Selph batted for Gaston. Selph singled to right and Jones stopped at second. Funk forced Selph

Reynolds' Jaw Broken in Clash with Dickey

Washington, D. C., July 4.—[Special.]—Carl Reynolds, Washington outfielder, sustained a broken jaw today when he was punched by Catcher Bill Dickey of the New York Yankees.

The display of fisticuffs came in the seventh inning of the first game of a double header. Reynolds charged in from third base and Dickey, who was blocking the plate, was knocked off balance. Regaining his feet, Dickey delivered a right to the jaw and before Reynolds could retaliate officials and players pulled them apart. Both were ejected from the game.

No one was able to say how long Reynolds will be out of uniform.

Baer Whips Levinsky in 20 Round Bout

Reno, Nev., July 4.—[Special.]—Max Baer, fighting the headiest fight he ever has made, won a 20 round decision this afternoon from King Levinsky. There was no question when Referee George Blake lifted Baer's arm in token of victory at the end of the long journey.

The crowd of 8,000 that gathered for the occasion, saw the verdict coming long before the end of the fight.

Baer, an improved fighter over other days, won 17 of the 20 rounds. Levinsky carried two and one was even. Blake, the referee, gave four rounds to the Chicagoan, two even, and fourteen for Baer.

Takes No Undue Chances.

The final decision was so obvious even before the fight had gone half way it was a foregone conclusion. Baer boxed and punched his way to victory. He took no undue chances, blocked nicely when he was fearing the vaunted Levinsky right hand swing, and kept up that relentless and resistless attack to the stomach and to the kidney.

One round was much like another. Baer stayed away until he could come in with a left or right to the body. As the pair clinched Baer would shoot a right hand swing to the kidney. This attack took toll of the Kingfish and even his youth and ability to withstand punishment was of no avail.

In the last half of the fight there was never a break in the rounds that belonged to Baer.

More Stars Attend.

Jack Dempsey and Fred B. Balzar, governor of Nevada, were present. Hollywood's movie colony was well represented. Tom Mix, Wallace Beery, and Ralph Forbes occupied ringside seats.

King Tut, rugged Minneapolis welterweight, knocked out Madison Dix of Bellingham, Wash., in the second round of their scheduled six round bout. Unleashing a two fisted attack that had his opponent in distress from the first, Frank Battaglia of Minneapolis stopped George Braselton of San Francisco in the third round of a six round bout. Battaglia weighed 160 pounds and Braselton 168.

Report Farley Will Resign from Boxing Commission

New York, July 4.—(AP)—The New York Herald-Tribune says James A. Farley, manager of the Franklin D. Roosevelt forces at the Democratic national convention, will resign as chairman of the state boxing commission to devote all his time to the presidential campaign. Farley declined to comment.

Arlett Hits 4 Home Runs; Second Time This Season

Baltimore, Md., July 4.—(AP)—Buzz Arlett, Baltimore outfielder, hit four home runs in the first game of today's double header with Reading. It was the second time this season that Arlett had hit four circuit drives in one game. Baltimore won, 21 to 10.

PIRATES POUND GRIMES; SUBDUE BUSH IN 11TH

Errors Ruin Bruins in 2d Game.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 4.—The so-called glorious Fourth was anything but a holiday for the one time gay Cubs. They folded up in a morning fight with the first place Pirates by 9 to 6 because something resembling old age seemed to creep over Burleigh Grimes and Charley Root. And they caved in again in the afternoon by 6 to 5 in 11 innings, not because of any lack of pitching on the part of Guy Bush but because they flopped around in the field like a village firemen's nine in the year's first practice. The defeats dropped the Cubs to third place.

The Cubs did the best they could to make Grimes' after breakfast effort a success. With a homer by Vin Barton accounting for half of the loot, they banished Larry Lefty French from the scene in the opening inning with a four run blast. The lead began to melt away almost instantly, and what little was left of it when the third arrived disappeared entirely under an assault that Root couldn't check until after six Buccaneers had dashed across the plate. That was more than was needed by Bill Harris, who performed gallantly as French's successor.

Bush's Defense Caves In.

If it had been only a matter of Bush's pitching in the second game, he would have triumphed in a romp. A home run by Kiki Cuyler, who transgressed later in the struggle, and a few other hits put Bush out in front by 3 to 0 going into the home sixth. His defense fell apart in that inning. Grimm blundered and three of the boys held a convention under a pop fly that was permitted to drop. Three runs and a tie resulted. The Cubs moved out into the lead again, this time by two runs, but the Pirates cut it in half in the eighth and finally tied it in the ninth when a fumble by Cuyler put the run in position to score.

The finish of Bush's hopes appeared in the eleventh when Padden, who had supplanted Grace, singled to left with one out. Bush fanned the pitcher and then succumbed to the deadly Waner poison. Baby Waner jammed a single into right, putting Padden on third. Brother Paul was purposely passed. Then Floyd Vaughan, who had exchanged harmless punches with Marvin Gudat in the morning battle because he thought the young Cub had tried to spike him, put an end to the show. He beat out a slow roller to Herman, and Padden ran home with the deciding tally.

MORNING GAME

The four run first inning that put French out of business in a hurry opened with Herman singling to center. English bunted him to second. Stephenson rolled out to Piet and Cuyler would have struck out if Grace hadn't dropped a tip foul. It proved the difference between four runs and nothing. Cuyler followed with a double to left, Herman scoring. The first pitch was all that Barton cared to see. He clubbed it into the right field seats for two more tallies. Grimm hit a two bagger to right and Hartnett's single over third sent him home with the last run of the inning.

Grimes lost no time giving signs of his feebleness. It wasn't his fault that only one scored on him in the Pirates' opening half. Paul Waner tripled to right with one out. Vaughan walked and went to third while the senior Waner was scoring on Traynor's single. Barbee then hoisted a fly to short right and it bore all the earmarks of a hit until Herman, after charging out to where Barton should have been, grabbed the ball. Traynor was so sure that it was going to fall safe that he was well on his way to third. It was a simple matter for Herman to double him off first.

Rigler Is Ageing, Too.

The main difficulty in the Pirate second was a pass and Umpire Rigler, who, like Grimes, appears to be ageing. Piet drew a ticket with one out and loped to third on a single to center by Grace. Jurges made a whale of a stop in deep short on Harris' grass cutter and pegged to Herman to force Grace. Herman whipped the ball to Grimm and apparently beat the runner, but Rigler's views on the matter were exactly the opposite. Meanwhile Piet slipped across the plate.

P. Waner singled to center to start the third and the big parade was on. Vaughan singled to left and Traynor singled to right, P. Waner scoring. What was left of the gallant old Grimes was carted away and Root stepped in. Barbee welcomed him with a single, scoring Vaughan. Suhr was purposely passed, filling the bases, but the strategy wasn't a success. Piet's double to center cleaned up the bases. Grace and Harris were handled easily, but Baby Waner slapped one into the right field corner to send Piet home. The Baby figured his drive was worth a home run, but he was nipped at the plate.

More Help from Rigler.

The Pirates got some more help from Rigler in the fourth, when he called Vaughan safe on a drive scooped up by Grimm. Root, who covered on the play, had the ball a step

PLAYTIME WHIPS PITTSBURGHER IN MUD AT LATONIA

Winner Returns $18.34; Stake Values Cut.

Latonia, Ky., July 4.—(AP)—The last choice in the betting came home first in the Independence handicap at Latonia today, the Southland Stable's Playtime beating out Manta and Pittsburgher, the favorite to win the $5,000 added mile and an eighth event.

They left the post with Playtime in the lead, Manta second and Pittsburgher third. They finished in that order, Playtime holding until the last the five length lead won shortly after the breakaway.

The track was more than sloppy, and Playtime found the going more to his liking than did Manta, owned by Brownell Combs, and the floundering favorite from the Shady Brook farm. Playtime was timed in 1:54 3-5 and paid $18.34 for $2.

Cousin Joe, the fourth starter, was a hopeless last.

Kentucky's state racing commission today authorized the Latonia Jockey club to cut the average value of its stakes from $900 to $600 for the balance of the current meeting, ending July 21.

Authorization was given after a conference with the club officials. The reductions are effective July 12.

Simultaneously the club announced reductions in general admission to a flat $2, the club absorbing the federal tax. The clubhouse admission was cut from $4.40 to $3, including the tax.

15 Named for River Forest Stakes Today

Fifteen fleet 2 year olds were named overnight for the River Forest stakes which tops today's Arlington card. The 5½ furlong dash will have a gross value of $5,000. Red Whisk, Liqueur, Capsheaf, Three Daggers, and Marooned were the more highly fancied of those in the overnight field.

Go Fetch, gelding, which won the first race at Arlington yesterday, changed ownership as a yearling for $125. Carry the News which finished third was the highest priced yearling of last year's Saratoga sales, going for $16,500.

Miss Purray tasted defeat for the first time in her career in the Columbia purse. Wise Anne beat her a head. . . . Old Chick Lang gave Miss Purray a mighty ride down the stretch but Miss Purray wasn't good enough. . . . First time Lang had ridden here since Reigh Count went into retirement. . . . Couldn't find anybody in the crowd who bet on Go Fetch except John Schank. He was holding a fistfull of tickets. . . . Five candidates for the classic reached Arlington yesterday. Stepenfetchit, Osculator, and Cathop came in from Latonia. Gusto, the American Derby winner, and Pompeius arrived from New York. . . . John Carey replaced Noah McClelland, who resigned as placing judge on Saturday. . . . Moderation was a red hot tip in the fourth and those who backed him wound up with only a copy of the morning line. . . . Jouett Shouse forgot politics for the afternoon and was out to see Equipoise run. . . . So did Breckenridge Long of Washington. The easterners took their most severe beating of the Arlington season when Don Tasker failed them in the sixth race. But Bill Schmitt, the Chicago undertaker, was happy. His horse, Curtsey, won the race at 23 to 1.

Equipoise Is Victor Again at Arlington

of the stretch was three lengths to the good.

The crowd was literally ripping the roof off the stands by this time with cheers for the champion. He won the race by that electric dash on the last turn. Workman looked around midway in the stretch. He knew there was no danger of defeat now. Yet Tred Avon weaved from the outside to a point next to the rail and began to move up so swiftly that many of Equipoise's backers gasped.

Close Finish O. K. with Rider.

Workman was not worried. He had pulled Equipoise up and was content to win by a narrow margin. Except for Tred Avon's last dash of speed Equipoise didn't have to answer a challenge coming down the stretch.

Workman rode Equipoise strictly to the orders of Trainer Fred Hopkins. "He'll win, but let him do it as easily as possible on this difficult track," Hopkins told Workman as he lifted the jockey into the saddle.

Equipoise came out of the race as sound as a dollar. And the thousands who backed him were also solvent after they had collected on their tickets.

A great and mighty horse is Equipoise. He delivers when the most is expected from him.

STOP, FARMERS! DON'T SHOOT FOX ON YOUR LAND

Reynard Goes for Rabbits, Not Fat Hens.

BY BOB BECKER.

The presence of foxes on farm lands within a comparatively short distance of Chicago's loop district long has been known to a number of land owners in Chicagoland who hunt down and kill the animals. The assumption is sly Reynard has no redeeming qualities because he stands condemned as a quail and a chicken killer.

While the foxes that live in Chicagoland may not have the same food habits of animals located in other states, where the environment and food supplies would be different, landowners should be interested in the investigation of red and gray foxes in Virginia. The quail hunters in that state insisted the animals killed too many quail and should be exterminated. The other side of the scrap was furnished by the fox hunters who insisted their sport should not be sacrificed because the foxes didn't eat as many quail as commonly was thought.

Prefer Rabbit Meat.

The United States biological survey stepped into this private fight and immediately started an investigation of the food habits of the gray and red foxes to determine what they were feeding on. First reports of this investigation have just been announced. They are "agin" the quail hunters because stomach examinations show the Virginia foxes prefer rabbit meat to the flesh of game birds. The evidence was secured last winter when the foxes did not have as wide a variety of food as during the summer months.

In fifty stomachs examined rabbit was the leading article of food. Quail remains were found in only one stomach and the remains of small nongame birds in only six.

Eaten by 29 of the examined foxes the rabbits comprised about 44 per cent of all the food material analyzed. The fox has been usually associated in fables and authentic stories with the mice of meadows and fields. In fact some outdoor fans tell of attracting foxes within easy "looking range" by squeaking like a mouse.

Find Poultry, Sheep.

Therefore it's not surprising that the Virginia fox investigation revealed mice and rats to the extent of 17 per cent of the whole diet of the animals examined.

BRAVES DEFEAT PHILLIES IN BOTH GAMES ON BILL

Boston Takes First, 8-6; Wins Second, 9-0.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 4.—(AP)—The Boston Braves defeated the Phillies twice today, 8 to 6 and 9 to 0. The Phils, however, filed an official protest to President John Heydler on a ruling of the umpires which deprived them of two runs in the seventh inning of the opener. In the second game Sox Selhold limited the Phillies to five hits, four of them by Chuck Klein, who hit his 25th homer of the year in the third inning of the first battle.

REDS WIN; 2D CALLED.

St. Louis, Mo., July 4.—(AP)—The Cincinnati Reds and the St. Louis Cardinals battled to a 3 to 3 deadlock in the second game of their holiday double header today which went 13 innings and then was called because of darkness. Cincinnati won the opener, 7 to 3. Cincinnati came from behind to tie the score in the eighth inning of the second game and thereafter the teams fought evenly without either being able to score. Dean went the entire route for the Cards, while the Reds substituted Frey for Ogden in the eighth inning, after a pinch hitter had batted for Ogden. Collins got a homer for the Cards in the nightcap and Crabtree hit one for the Reds.

Washington, D. C., July 4.—(AP)—The league leading New York Yankees were defeated twice today by the Senators, 5 to 3 and 12 to 6. In the first game Washington broke Vernon Gomez's 11 game winning streak. Shortstop Cronin batted in two runs with his homer.

There were five homers in the nightcap, with Babe Ruth pounding out his 23d of the season in the fourth inning. Manush and Harris slugged for the circuit for Washington, with Lary and Crosetti getting the other Yankee homers.

Gomez, losing the first, yielded seven hits. Weaver and Marberry, Washington pitchers, were touched for ten. Washington collected 16 hits off Allen and W. Brown in the second game. Lloyd Brown yielded the New Yorkers 11. Scores:

The second game was a slugging bee in which Victor Sorrell yielded 13 hits, one of them a homer by Fred Schulte in the third inning, while the Tigers were combing Fisher, Gray and Herbert for 14 safeties. Ten Tigers faced Fischer and Gray in the third inning when six runs were scored.

In the Wake of the News

SEN. PEGLER EXPLAINS IT.

SENATOR WESTBROOK PEGLER, whose unanswerable logic and keen analysis of current national problems electrified the recent Democratic convention, is an old friend of The Wake's. We knew him way back when he was a gangling kid and although we were much younger he did not resent our calling his "Red" because he always was a democratic sort of fellow and despite his occasional harsh words a sentimentalist at heart.

So it was with some gratification we found he still kept track of the young boys who looked up to him as he was approaching manhood. In proof thereof, we reproduce the following letter from him:

"Dear Harvey: I read in your col. a letter from one of your crpts., offering, among other criticisms of American sportsmanship, the incident of the toasted sled-runners on the Olympic bob-sled run at Lake Placid last winter. He thought this was done so that the runners would melt grooves on the slide and not slew off during the descent.

"It is true that American bobbers—and some of the Europeans, too—used a blow-torch on their runners but common sense (Editor's note—How typical of Sen. Pegler) should tell any one that even though a runner be brought to white heat, the instant that runner is put on the snow and ice, it cools off. Did you ever see a horse-shoer dip a red-hot shoe into a tub of water and, in a couple of seconds, handle it with his bare hands? There is an appreciable pause between the placing of the sled on the run and the signal to go.

"There was some kidding at Placid about the idea of the hot runners melting grooves and I think some of us wrote about this, but with facetious intent.

"The purpose in heating the runners was perfectly fair. It was to melt away the little particles of frost or ice adhering to the steel which would have retarded the sleds by some fraction of a second on the slide. Skirunners know how these little accumulations act on their runners. The torches melted these particles and boiled away the moisture as steam.

"That was all there was to it. I am not even sure that the Americans invented the trick but I am sure they were not the only ones to use it.

"I am a great admirer of your stuff and I am confident that you are the same. Sincerely, Pegler."

Now we are told by the "Cardinal News" that numbering of baseball players, recently adopted by the National league, is not an American league idea, although first adopted officially, by the junior organization, but was the idea of Branch Rickey, vice president of the St. Louis Cardinals. Rickey started numbering his players a decade ago but dropped the plan when no other National league club followed suit.

Cubs Skid to Third Place by Losing to Pirates, 9-6, 6-5

ahead of the runner, but that didn't mean anything to the arbiter. This gift became a run on Traynor's double and an infield out. Then it was the Cubs' turn to do something. Barton triples with one out in the sixth, the first hit since the opening session. Grimm's single scored Barton. Hartnett doubled to put Grimm on third, but Jurges flied to short left and Moore, batting for Root, fouled to Traynor.

The Cubs brewed a run from Harris' wildness in the eighth. Hartnett walked, Jurges scratched a hit to Traynor, and Gudat, batting for May, walked. Hartnett scored while Gudat was being forced at second on Herman's bounder to Harris. This was the play in which Gudat and Vaughan exchanged compliments.

AFTERNOON GAME

The Cubs had to wait quite a stretch in the afternoon for as much as a lone base hit, but once started they got results. Herman pried open the fourth with a single to center, thus earning the distinction of being the first guest to reach base. English tried the hit and run, but his bounder was snared by Suhr close to first. Then Cuyler discovered he still has some friends in his old place of employment. He was treated to a flock of cheering as he circled the bags behind Herman after driving his homer over the distant fence in left center. Stephenson and Grimm followed with singles, but no more runs were forthcoming.

Bush Starts to Crumble.

Stephenson and Barton worked out a scheme good for a run in the sixth, giving the Cubs a 3 to 0 advantage for the time being. Stevie doubled to the wall in right center after two were out and charged home on Barton's single to right. In the interests of additional runs Grimm singled to center, but Hartnett's attempt was futile.

When Grimm fumbled a grounder by Lloyd Waner to start the sixth Bush's string of runless innings began to crumple. P. Waner walloped a two bagger to right and the kid brother kept running until he reached the plate. After Vaughan had been tossed out the fatal blunder on a popup by Traynor was committed. Both Cuyler and Barton were ready to catch the ball, but Herman dashed into the play and the two others pulled away. The result was a fluke double, scoring P. Waner. Traynor dashed home with the tying run when Barbee doubled along the left field line. Bush stopped the next two men.

Stephenson Crosses Plate.

The Cubs didn't have to do any work to get back in the lead by one run in the seventh. The Pirates did the work for them. Jurges led off with a tap thrown wild to first by Vaughan. The rain was so heavy at this stage that the actors fled from the scene. When the show was resumed Spencer balked and Jurges took second. Herman bounced to short and Vaughan tried to head off Jurges at third, but the throw was late. Then English lined to P. Waner and Jurges scooted home after the catch.

There was nothing phoney about the run captured by the Chicagoans in the eighth. Stephenson started this incident with a high bounding infield single. Barton bunted on the fly to Traylor, Grimm walked and Hartnett filed to right. Jurges then slashed a rakish two bagger to right center, Stephenson scoring and Grimm halting at third. Bush ended it with a pop foul to Grace. The Pirates recaptured this run in their half on singles by Vaughan and Traynor, Cuyler's fumble of the latter hit, and Barbee's infield out.

Cuyler's costly blunder that kept Bush from winning in the ninth came on Grace's single that opened the inning. Ki fumbled long enough to let the runner reach second. Finney went out to run for Grace and took such a big lead off second that a good throw would have nailed him easily. Hartnett made the throw, but it was wide of its mark. Finney went to third on a bunt by Comorosky, batting for Spencer, and scored the tying run when Baby Waner flied to Cuyler. Everything was quiet after this until the Pirates broke it up.

Cubs on Way Home

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 4.—The Cubs jumped back to Chicago tonight. They will have a chance to rest tomorrow before opening a long home stand against the eastern invaders on Wednesday. The clouting Phillies will be the first to show up.

The Pirates will have their troubles for the next few days. Starting tomorrow they must battle the Giants here six times in four days. The Pirates' schedule for the remainder of the month is 40 games, and if they can get through that siege successfully they'll be real contenders.

Several large cannon crackers exploded under Umpire Rigler's feet at the plate in the afternoon game. Some fan probably figured that was one way of keeping the tired guesser awake.

Lyons Tames Indians After Ferrell Wins

and Jones went to third. Hayes singled to right, Jones scoring and Funk reaching third, but the rally ended when Cissell went in to short center to pull down Sullivan's fly.

Ferrell, in the ninth, personally saw to it that his margin became safer. Cissell doubled after two were out and Wes drove him home with a single to left.

SECOND GAME

The second game was similar to the first in that the Indians made a run in the first inning and the Sox waited until the fifth to tie it.

The run with which the Indians pushed off was unearned, though a couple of good hits figured in its production. Burnett singled with one down and went to third on Averill's single. Vosmik fanned and Averill was trapped on the way to second, Burnett holding third. Averill, however, returned to first and knocked the ball out of Blue's hand. Then Burnett scored and Averill finally got to second. Appling threw out Morgan.

Hildebrand was injured in catching Appling's hot drive to end the fourth inning and the Sox greeted his successor, Harder, by tying the score in the fifth. Grube sent a slow one to Harder for a single and went to second when Mel threw the ball away. Grube moved to third on Lyon's sacrifice and scored on Funk's single to center. Hayes fouled to Kamm and Sullivan forced Funk.

No Help for Kress.

The Sox took the lead in the sixth despite a fadeout after a big start. Fothergill beat out a hit to Burnett, who made a brilliant effort to relay the ball to first via Cissell after he had fielded the ball while skidding on his chin. Kress then tripled off the left field wall, scoring Fothergill, but was stranded on third because Blue, Appling and Grube could do nothing in his behalf.

Sullivan led off the eighth with a double off the scoreboard in left center, but was out by an eyelash when he attempted to stretch it. Kamm threw out Fothergill for the second out, then Kress was hit by a pitched ball, only to be forced by Blue.

SARAZEN TO PLAY AT GLEN OAK FOR OLYMPIC FUND

He and Armour to Meet Cooper, Smith Sunday.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Chicagoans will have their first 1932 opportunity to see Gene Sarazen, holder of the American and British open golf championships, next Sunday afternoon when the swarthy New Yorker and Tommy Armour of Detroit come to the Glen Oak Country club near Glen Ellyn to engage Harry Cooper of the home club and Horton Smith of Oak Park in an exhibition match for the American Olympic games fund.

The match is one of several sports events being arranged by the American Olympic committee under the direction of President Avery Brundage of Chicago to obtain funds to send American athletes to the tenth Olympic games, which will open in Los Angeles on July 30. Sarazen, Armour, Cooper, and Smith are playing for a guarantee sufficient only to meet their expenses. Admission to the match will be one dollar.

Sarazen World's Leading Pro.

In Sarazen the gallery at Glen Oak Sunday, which is expected to outdo that of last August when Cooper and Smith defeated Billy Burke and George Von Elm, will be watching the world's leading professional golfer. Gene was famous in 1922, when he won the national open and the P. G. A. titles at the age of 21, and since then he has ranked with the best in the game. But it wasn't until this year that he achieved a feat which by comparison places him on a plane with Bobby Jones. He is the only professional to win both the American and British open crowns in the same year. Not even the mighty Hagen, who has won the British open twice and the United States open four times, ever has been able to crowd both victories into one year.

His partner and his opponents Sunday are no less talented than Sarazen, all three of them having been leaders in international golf for several years. There isn't a major open title of any importance that Armour, the Scotch world war hero, hasn't won for himself. Tommy has taken the American, British, Canadian, and western opens and the P. G. A. title. Cooper and Smith are rated the leading pros in the Chicago district. Cooper, at 22, forced Armour into a playoff for the national open championship before losing, and has been a consistent money winner for five years. Smith is one of the prodigies of the game since his rise in the winter of 1930, when he won thirteen open championships.

Match to Be 18 Holes.

Sunday's match will be at eighteen holes and will begin at 3 p. m. Sarazen and Armour are expected to give a demonstration of wood and iron shots before the match. The quartet will play over one of the best layouts in the country, since Glen Oak is one of the nine Chicago courses rated in class A.

PHILADELPHIANS SWEEP OLYMPIC ROWING TRIALS

Win Six Races in 3 Day Regatta.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 4.—[Special.]—Oarsmen of Philadelphia's famous boathouse row won all of the Olympic honors that the sixtieth annual regatta of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen had to offer. In the three day regatta which ended this afternoon, six places on the Olympic rowing squad were chosen, along with national champions in all classes, and all six of these places went to men of Philadelphia clubs.

Two places were won yesterday, in the four oared shells with coxswain and double sculls, and the Schuylkill river navy today added four others.

The steady sweep of Philadelphia victories started with the victory of the 125 pound Clark twins for the Undine Barge club in the pairs without coxswain, and ended in the victory of Bill Miller of the Penn Athletic club in the single sculls.

Miller Leads from Start.

Miller, who was defending the national championship in this race, led from the start to the finish, rowing at a long, easy stroke and never raising it to win by between two and three lengths from Ken Myers of the Bachelors' club in 8:07.

The quarter mile dash had been a sensational curtain raiser, with first Al Vogt of Penn A. C. and the giant Winthrop Rutherfurd of Princeton threatening Gilmore. Rutherfurd closed in hard on the leader and trailed at the finish by just a bit more than a second.

There were only two crews entered for the pair oared race, the Clark twins, Eugene and Tom, rowing against the Bachelors' pair of Tim Anderson, Pennsylvania university's stroke, and Sydney Jellinek. The Bachelors went through Strawberry bridge in the lead, but the Clarks were rowing a much straighter race, and picked out a bee line on the finish and clung to it as the others wandered too far over toward shore and then struggled vainly to get back again.

Detroit Finishes Fast.

Next came the four-oared shells without coxswain and a pretty stormy race. There were five crews and some crowding. The first start was called back when Penn A. C. and the Bachelors collided just before Strawberry bridge was reached and in the second start, there was another slight collision, between the Bachelors and Detroit.

Penn Athletic club, cutting across to the inside lane, steering well and rowing well, carried on to finish in front, but the Detroit four, which had gone all over the river in an erratic course, came like mad at the finish and slid across the finish one and a fifth seconds behind the leaders, with the Century Rowing club of St. Louis in third place.

CAMP MEETING WARNED OF RED PULPIT LEANINGS

Methodists Urged to Seek Solution in Religion.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Communistic teaching has begun to bore its way into the present day pulpit, according to a warning issued to Methodists yesterday at the Des Plaines camp meeting. The speaker issuing this warning was the Rev. S. C. Carswell, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Des Plaines. He surveyed the leading issues faced by pastors and church people, and listed communism as a menace which, if not watched, will seep from Russia into American church life via theological seminaries and pulpits.

Instances of theological seminaries where "red" leanings may be found were not cited by Mr. Carswell. However, he said he received a pamphlet recently that charged such teaching to some of the faculty at Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston.

Calls "Some Preachers Reds."

The Rev. Mr. Carswell declared that "some preachers have adopted the communistic viewpoint." This, the speaker said, ultimately will lead not only to revolution within the church, but also the actual destruction of the present social order.

"The chaotic times through which we are passing make the time right for revolutionary inroads," said the Rev. Mr. Carswell, as he stated his belief that such propaganda is being broadcast from recognized and established churches.

"The only answer to such teaching," the Rev. Mr. Carswell asserted, "lies in a pentecostal experience such as related in the New Testament. God links himself with men and works through them by preparing them for any crisis or upheaval that may arise."

Red Advances Checked.

The Rev. Mr. Carswell explained at the close of his address that communistic teaching from pulpits has not increased during the last two years, but prior to that the propaganda had begun its invasion of the sermon with noticeable effect.

Last night the camp meeting assembly was addressed by the Rev. Dr. J. S. Ladd Thomas of Philadelphia. The Rev. Charles H. Draper, director of the camp meeting, spoke enthusiastically of the camp meeting attendance this year. He declared the present season promises to be the largest in years.

Calls Dry League Failure.

Although himself an ardent dry, Dr. J. S. Ladd Thomas, of Germantown, Pa., last night told an audience on the camp meeting grounds that the temperance question can never be settled by preventive organizations such as the Anti-Saloon league.

Dr. Thomas said solution of the problem must be found through education of the general populace against the drink evil.

JAMES J. HILL'S ELDEST SON DIES OF HEART ATTACK

New York, July 4.—[Special.]—James Norman Hill, eldest son of James J. Hill, founder of the Great Northern railroad and empire builder of the northwest, died of a heart attack on Sunday evening at his country home, Big Tree farm, Wheatley Hills, L. I., at the age of 62.

Mr. Hill had followed his father into railroading and banking, but retired ten years ago from the board of the Northern Pacific.

P. J. KING DIES; ONCE RULER OF POLICY LOTTERY

Made Million Before Law Called Halt.

Patrick [Patsy] J. King, who was reputed to have made a fortune of a million dollars or more thirty years ago when he was the "policy king" of Chicago, died Sunday night in St. Elizabeth's hospital, it was learned yesterday. He was 73 years old, and had been a patient in the hospital since April 11.

King was perhaps the first man in Chicago to operate on a large scale the policy game, a form of lottery in which chances are sold for as little as 5 cents. Although operation of the game has been confined in recent years to the Negro districts, King's runners sold tickets throughout the poorer districts of the city with little opposition in the early years of the century.

Lottery Laws Lenient.

At that time laws against lotteries were much less strict than at present, and King's wealth mounted rapidly. He built a handsome residence on West Washington boulevard and was reputed to have lost thousands of dollars on the horse races.

In 1904, however, the Citizens association obtained the passage by the legislature of a law against lotteries and King and his principal lieutenants were indicted. He was tried twice, one trial resulting in a disagreement and the other in an acquittal. Shortly afterward he dropped out of the gambling picture in the city.

Gambling Profits Spent.

He announced a few years ago that he was quitting gambling and entering the real estate business. In recent years he was said to be in modest circumstances, his gambling profits having been spent as fast as they were made. His home at the time of his death was at 2340 Rosemont avenue.

A son and a daughter survive him. Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock Thursday in St. Henry's Roman Catholic church, Hoyne and Devon avenues. Burial will be in Calvary cemetery.

Mr. Hill had been an invalid for a year. He was born in Ottawa, but spent his young manhood in Michigan in the lumber business.

He was admitted to the bar in 1890 and came to Chicago the following year. He was elected state representative from the Sixth district in 1904, and was reelected for the following term.

Mr. Hill was a thirty-third degree Mason and was prominent in the various Masonic orders. He was also active in patriotic societies.

FIND WATCHMAN SLAIN; HUNT GIRL AND HER FATHER

Louis Cosco, 43 years old, 7615 Dobson avenue, was found shot to death yesterday in the Union Foundry works, 7610 Greenwood avenue, where he was employed as a watchman. Einar Anderson, who had reported to relieve Cosco, found the body, with the watchman's revolver, which had not been fired, on the floor.

Police, seeking a motive for the murder, learned that Cosco feared some mysterious danger and on Sunday night asked his son-in-law, Angelo Carvelli, to make the rounds with him. Carvelli spent the earlier part of the night with Cosco and went home. He told police that while they were touring the plant his father-in-law confided that a man in the neighborhood wanted Cosco to marry his 17 year old daughter. He had refused, Cosco told Carvelli, on the grounds that he was too old. Police were seeking the girl and her father for questioning.

Cosco shot and killed Mrs. Carvelli's first husband, Joseph Sergio, in an argument in 1927. Police at first believed that Cosco might have been slain to avenge the death of Sergio, but dismissed the theory when they learned that Sergio has no relatives in Chicago.

WINNIPEG TRADE IS SLOW; PRICES OF WHEAT FIRM

Close at Liverpool Shows Small Advance.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

With American grain markets closed, celebrating the Fourth of July, Winnipeg grain men had a quiet day, there being no news or business from the outside, either in futures or cash grain. Liverpool was strong early, opening unchanged to ¼d higher, advancing ⅝d to ¾d over Saturday's close up to 2:15. At the finish there was a reaction and the close was unchanged to ⅜d lower.

In Winnipeg the wheat market was stronger early, and closed firm, unchanged to ½c higher. July finished at 58¾c; October, 56⅛@56¼c, and December, 57⅛@57⅜c. Export business was reported flat.

The strength in Liverpool was due to small world shipments, 10,692,000 bu, compared with 9,918,000 bu the previous week, the movement for both weeks being under European requirements. Last year shipments were 14,455,000 bu.

Buenos Aires Lower.

Buenos Aires was ⅛@¼c lower on wheat, with July 45c and August 45⅛c. Corn ⅜@½c higher, July being 30⅝c and August 30⅜c. Oats were unchanged, with July 20¾c; flax for July, 57⅛c, an advance of ⅜c; August, 57⅜c, up 1c. Exporting countries were offering less wheat.

The cash market in Winnipeg was slow. Rains were reported fairly general to heavy over western Kansas, except in the eastern part of Manitoba and the area in western central Saskatchewan and east central Alberta, said Logan & Bryan's Winnipeg office.

Farmers' deliveries in western Canada from Aug. 1, 1931, to July 1, 1932, aggregated 253,875,000 bu of wheat, which will receive the 5c bonus per bushel. The amount delivered during the same period last year was 306,086,000 bu.

Deliveries Lower.

Deliveries of wheat in Winnipeg on July contracts Monday were 329,000 bu, against 10,280,000 bu on Saturday. Oats deliveries were 27,000 bu; flax, 29,000 bu; barley, 15,000 bu, and rye, 679,000 bu.

Chicago has received several cars of new wheat in the last few days, the first of the new crop. They grade mostly No. 1 hard and will be on sale today. They test around 60 to 62 lbs. A sample was shown yesterday from a field between Decatur and Springfield, Ill., where yields of 42 bu per acre were secured.

Corn Has Good Growth.

M. L. Vehon, who covered the corn belt of the state in the last two days, says Illinois corn is wonderful, a week or two ahead of normal, and ranges from knee to shoulder high in many places. Similar reports were made by other grain men, who were out examining the crops over the holidays.

A wire from Winnipeg to J. E. Bennett & Co. said Fort William had loaded 14 vessels that cleared with 2,345,000 bu of grain on Saturday, it being one of the largest fleets to leave that port. Of wheat alone there was 2,125,000 bu.

Holds Economic Recovery Handicapped by Public Debt

Economic recovery is severely handicapped by the present staggering public debt, and whether the action be voluntary or forced is secondary to the fact that debts have to be reduced, says the Fitch summary of trade and industry. With each dip in the deflation cycle the tax load becomes more onerous, but it is a hopeful augury, according to the survey, that the matter of scaling down of the public debt is now recognized as one of the certainties to come.

Banking Laws Likely to Face Revision Soon

BY SCRUTATOR.

As the result of the many bank failures throughout the country in the last year or two it is likely that numerous proposals to change the national banking laws will come before the next congress.

The advocates of legislation to use the federal reserve system to guarantee deposits of the member banks will be heard. The plan for an insurance fund to protect depositors, to be contributed by member banks proportionately, also will come up. It already has been broached in a bill before congress. Then, too, the proponents and opponents of branch banking will have their innings.

Room for Improvement.

There is no doubt that national and state banking laws can be improved and even the present laws better administered. But it is highly doubtful if the banks that are members of the reserve system will consent to an extension of paternalism, as proposed in the deposit guarantee and insurance schemes. The record of several states that have tried and discarded guarantee plans, coupled with the history of the joint land banks, have made banks wary of further innovations.

The recent banking history of Chicago and the middle west affords illustration of the effects of laws guaranteeing deposits. There have been more than 125 bank closings in Chicago and vicinity in the last two years, with the result that well over 100 million dollars of depositors' money has been tied up. Last Saturday, the banks made midyear reports and the 67 banks reporting their figures to the Chicago clearing house showed total cash resources of about 467 million dollars. These resources were larger than three months ago in spite of smaller aggregate deposits.

Suppose They Had to Pay.

What would have happened if these banks had been obliged to pay off deposits of closed banks? Either their cash resources would have been considerably reduced or they would have been forced to maintain such resources by calling in loans or selling investments. In the first event, these banks would have weakened their position at the expense of their own depositors and stockholders. In the second event, they would have curtailed credit to customers, thereby hurting general business, or imposed a further burden on the securities markets. But business already is in the doldrums and the securities markets are in the throes of collapse.

The big Chicago banks have afforded such aid to the smaller banks as deemed justifiable, but that has not prevented many failures. If the strong banks cannot prevent failures at home, should they be called on to aid banks elsewhere? Or would good banks in the smaller cities of the middle west be willing to join in guaranteeing deposits of the Chicago banks? This would be the practical effect of a law providing for a guarantee of deposits in federal reserve districts.

It is the contention of Chicago bankers that any scheme of guaranteeing bank deposits would disrupt the federal reserve system. While the national banks are compelled to be members, the state banks, which include some of the largest institutions in the country, may exercise their own choice. Many small state banks have held aloof from the reserve system because of capital investment requirements and many of the big state institutions might be impelled to withdraw if forced to join in some deposit guarantee plan.

BRITISH RUSH TO CONVERT WAR LOANS AT 3½ PCT.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, July 4.—A flood of applications for conversion of the 5 per cent war loan into the new 3½ per cent issue was received today and only about 2 per cent of the holders applied for redemption of their bonds.

Thus far there has been no request for redemption at the Bank of England, although today's applications for conversion, amounted to £285,000 [the pound is currently rated at $3.57] Among the big conversions is that of Sir William Morris, automobile manufacturer, whose total £850,000, represents the whole of his own and his company's holdings. The Imperial Chemical Industries, Ltd., is also converting its entire holdings, amounting to £760,000, as is the Rolls Royce company with £100,000 holdings and the National Union of Teachers with £172,000.

Committee Recommends Fisk Payment of 40 Pct.

The protective committee for holders of Fisk Rubber company bonds and notes, headed by Ferdinand Eberstadt, which recently proposed an immediate cash distribution of at least 20 per cent to these security holders, is publishing a statement favoring a cash distribution of about 40 per cent. This it says should be possible in view of the improvement in the company's financial position.

Average crude oil prices at ten representative fields, as computed by the Oil, Paint, and Drug Reporter, last week reached $1 a barrel for the first time since March 6, 1931. The average a year ago was $2.30c a barrel.

The Fisk Rubber Company

To the Holders of First Mortgage Twenty Year Eight Per Cent Sinking Fund Gold Bonds, Five-Year 5½% Sinking Fund Gold Notes, and Certificates of Deposit therefor:

The undersigned Committee, recently organized by owners of the above securities to endeavor to effect an immediate cash distribution, has received an encouraging response from holders of such securities, indicating their desire for prompt and definite action looking toward a substantial cash distribution.

June sales resulted in a particularly large turnover of inventory and the Committee is advised that in the near future the Receivers of the Company should have about $8,500,000 in cash and United States Government securities, in addition to about $6,500,000 of inventory and accounts receivable. This should permit, after payment of receivership and other prior expenses, a distribution of about 40% in cash on the Bonds and Notes plus a substantial subsequent realization on the accounts, inventory and other assets. The Committee is definitely in favor of such distribution and is actively working towards this end.

Holders of the above-mentioned Bonds, Notes and Certificates of Deposit therefor who favor a prompt cash distribution are urged to cooperate in its accomplishment by depositing such securities at once with the Depositary named below, under a Deposit Agreement, copies of which together with further information may be obtained from the Secretary of the Committee.

PAY $110,268 OF ENGINEERING BUILDING TAXES

Structure Reported 70% Occupied.

If you have a defaulted real estate bond and haven't been able to get the desired information regarding it from the bondholders' committee or from other sources, The Tribune may be of assistance to you. Write to "The Tribune Real Estate Bond Service, Chicago Tribune." Don't ask for information regarding more than one issue at a time. Give name of underwriter and full title of the bond. Inquiries must be accompanied by stamped, self-addressed envelope for personal reply.

BY AL CHASE.

Real estate taxes totaling $110,268 have been paid on the Engineering building at Wacker drive and North Wells street, within the past thirteen months, according to a bulletin just sent out by the American Bond and Mortgage company bondholders' protective committee to depositors of first mortgage bonds secured by this property, now in default. This payment, according to Craig B. Hazlewood, chairman of the committee, represents the balance due on 1927 taxes, $45,000 on account of 1929 taxes and $56,109 on account of the 1930 assessment.

CRAIG B. HAZLEWOOD. [A. P. Photo.]

The twenty-three story office building, occupying a site 101x150, at the southwest corner of Wacker drive and Wells street, is reported to be 70 per cent occupied. Only one of its five stores and shops is rented.

The mortgage indebtedness secured by this property includes the original issue of series A, first mortgage bonds, dated June 1, 1927, with a total par value of $3,500,000, all of which are outstanding; a junior lien of $250,000 in series B, first mortgage bonds, secured by the same trust indenture, and a second mortgage bond issue of $700,000. Five semi-annual interest payments on series A bonds, totaling $525,000, are in default.

Loans Hard to Negotiate.

According to an earnings statement from the Chicago Title and Trust company, receiver, which is included in the bulletin just issued, the net income of the property for the year ending Dec. 31, 1931, was $127,027 before interest and depreciation but after the deduction of $65,000 for estimated 1931 taxes. The gross income was $357,334, against which was charged gross operating expenses of $161,173 and occupancy costs of $69,153.

Reorganization of the property, the bulletin states, is dependent upon the obtaining of sufficient cash to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure and reorganization expenses and to provide a working capital for the building. However, the real estate loan situation at present is such that even temporary loans are difficult to obtain and it is pointed out, in the absence of funds necessary to finance the foreclosure sale, no plan of reorganization can be formulated and announced at the present time.

Majority of Bonds Deposited.

While a vast majority of the series A bonds are reported to be on deposit with the committee, there are a few holders that have not turned in their bonds for certificates of deposit.

The bondholders' protective committee, headed by Mr. Hazlewood, includes Frank W. Blair, Frederick G. Curry, H. K. Hallett, Dayton Keith, Joseph E. Otis, Walter J. Sugden and Charles W. Weston. George L. Wire is secretary.

Radio Corporation of America.

Please forward to me your latest investors' report on the stock of Radio Corporation of America.—W. S.

Radio Corporation of America was incorporated in 1919 to control a radio communication system. Since 1922 revenues from royalties and from the manufacture of radio equipment have become the bulk of its business.

In 1930 the company took over the radio equipment properties of General Electric and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing in exchange for 6,530,376 shares of common.

Activities now include manufacture of radios and radio equipment, broadcasting, production of motion pictures [through a substantial interest in Radio-Keith-Orpheum], royalties from licensing of patents and the making of phonographs and phonograph records.

Net income for the first quarter of 1932 was $503,000, about one-sixth of preferred B dividends, against net of $1,557,000, or two cents per common share, for the corresponding 1931 period.

Operations in 1931 and 1930 were affected by forced liquidation of many radio manufacturers, which forced a readjustment of prices, and expenses incidental to a program of unification.

Gross operating revenues for 1931 were $100,125,000, against $132,262,000 for 1930. Net income was $1,374,000, which equaled only $1.94 per share of $3.50 preferred A stock. Net for 1930 was $1,378,000, or two cents per common share, against net of $15,893,000 for 1929. Net for 1928 was $19,835,000.

On Dec. 31, 1931, current assets were $45,416,000 and current liabilities were $24,662,000. Cash assets alone were more than $24,000,000. Working capital was $20,754,000, against $36,355,000 the year before.

There were outstanding 395,597 shares of $3.50 class A preferred, 767,275 shares of $5 preferred B and 13,130,690 shares of common. No dividends are being paid on the preferred. There is no funded debt.

With the recapitalization of Radio-Keith-Orpheum in 1932 the company purchased a substantial portion of its debentures. This enabled it to increase its holdings to 66 per cent of the outstanding common stock.

The company is defendant in several important suits. The United States government is plaintiff in a case threatening the unification with Westinghouse Electric and with General Electric. Suits from competing companies, under the Clayton anti-trust act, ask for damages totaling almost $50,000,000.

LIVE STOCK FARM MOST LIKELY TO RETURN PROFITS

Corn Belt Farmers Tell How They Do It.

BY PAUL POTTER.

While fancy prices for pure bred live stock have gone the way of fancy and inflated stock market values, there is yet more chance to keep the farm operations on the right side of the ledger with cattle, hogs, horses and poultry than with any field crops a farmer could produce.

The premium a man can command for extra high quality products is still being paid to cattle feeders who did not overindulge in land or pure bred booms, with the result that they still are able to finance feeding operations.

This limitation on cattle feeding, plus the losses incurred in the last three years by many who formerly fed cattle, is largely responsible for the curtailments in beef production along with declines in consumption.

Tops Market with Steers.

The highest price received by a cattle feeder in the Chicago market since last April was paid to Henry A. Marshall of Tippecanoe county, Ind., last week. He was paid $8.25 per hundredweight for 25 yearling Angus steers averaging 904 pounds each. Part of the steers were from a prize winning load of South Dakota feeders Marshall bought last December at the international live stock exposition.

Mr. Marshall, long known as an outstanding Hereford breeder, donated his entire herd of white faces to Purdue university four years ago. He still maintains that good breeding is half the battle in profitable feeding and has been building up his Angus herd on that basis for some time.

Corn belt cattlemen are finding it profitable to begin feeding grain to nursing calves as soon as they will eat it and to produce baby beef rather than risk an investment over a long period. This is the position taken by Wilson Chenoweth of Shoals, Ind.

Starts Calves on Grain.

Chenoweth has 18 polled Hereford calves, all pure bred but one, which were born during February, March and April. On June 8 they averaged 295 pounds and were started on grain. The pasture where the cows are grazed being some distance from the barns Chenoweth built a creep in a shady corner and keeps a trough of grain inside so the calves can eat as much and as often as they wish.

"I plan to full feed these calves until next fall," Chenoweth states, "then sell them when they weigh 650 to 700 pounds. I also keep strict account of all feed consumed in order to determine the amount of grain necessary to produce each 100 pounds gain on nursing calves.

"My previous experience indicates that gains are much cheaper on cattle of this age than on older cattle. Another advantage is that you get your returns quicker than on cattle fed out as yearlings or two year olds.

Saves Losses at Weaning.

"This is important in times like these. Furthermore, the calves fed in this manner never lose their calf fat, they continue to do well and look well until sold, and the owner doesn't lose a lot of time and feed after weaning them."

In the Chenoweth system of calf feeding, experience has shown the following factors to be important: Selecting a well bred, thick, beefy herd sire; using cows that breed regularly and give ample milk for calves; early born calves, in February and March; full feed of grain from time the calves first nibble until they are sold in late fall; and use of as much home grown feed as possible, such as shelled corn, oats, soybeans, etc.

George Fassett, live stock farmer of Mercer county, Ill., is another feeder who believes best results in feeding stock for market comes by feeding the calves as soon as they will eat grain. He uses a mixture of corn and oats at first, gradually increasing the proportion of corn. Mr. Fassett feeds several carloads of cattle a year, and has marketed five loads in Chicago since March 1, topping the market with one shipment.

Confident of Farm Future.

Expressing confidence in the future of cattle feeding, Del M. Erritt, veteran feeder of Calhoun county, Ia., says that corn he recently marketed "on the hoof" in Chicago netted him 50 cents a bushel and the oats fed to his cattle brought him 30 cents a bushel.

Last week he sold two loads of steers on the Chicago market, averaging 1,155 pounds per head, for $7.60 per hundredweight. Mr. Erritt says these cattle made a "nice profit," having cost him $5.65 per hundred as feeders and showing gains of about 500 pounds while on feed.

Machine Tool Builders Hopeful for Fall Business

Machine tool and machinery builders manifest a strong feeling of optimism in regard to autumn business, says the American Machinist. July and August business is expected to continue at the low levels of recent months.

Says Indications Point to Big Russian Wheat Crop

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

MOSCOW, July 4. — According to present indications the current year's grain crop will be the biggest in the history of Russia, Valerian Ossinski, head of the state statistical bureau announced tonight. The yield per sectare [2.47 acres] probably would be at least six pounds greater than last year, he said, and the total crop harvested about 8,200,000 tons greater. M. Ossinski indicated that it was too early to attempt to determine the exact figures. The actual acreage sown was somewhat less than last year but this factor is expected to be more than offset by an increase in the yield per sectare.

Committee

Throughout the business cycle certain principles endure

The Northern Trust Company is the only loop bank whose entire structure is devoted exclusively to its own banking, investment and trust activities. Six spacious floors and two lower levels house an organization keyed to individualized, personal banking, bond, trust, savings and vault service

THROUGH MANY PHASES of the business cycle, The Northern Trust Company has held to a sound and unchanging concept of banking and trusteeship.

As at every period in its four decades, its organization is conducive to close personal contact between customer and banker.

As always, its strength is the strength of conservative banking.

Many, searching out this conservative bank, have brought here their banking, investment and trust affairs.

They have found, first of all, a stability that is the foundation of good banking practice.

And secondly, they have discovered throughout the departments of the institution, a facility in caring quickly and quietly for all the things they wish to be done.

BROKERS FEEL CHANGES SINCE MARKET BOOM

Chicago Exchange Seats Sell at $2,500.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Seats on the Chicago stock exchange reached a new low price for recent years last week. Two memberships were sold for $2,500 each. This is the lowest price since 1927, when the great bull market was just getting up steam. The enormous increase in the volume of trading in 1928 and 1929 sent seats skyrocketing.

An all time high of $110,000 was set in 1929. This is the equivalent of $55,000 for the present seats. Late in 1929 the number of seats was doubled through the declaration of 100 per cent membership dividend. Even after the bear market began seats sold as high as $45,000. Early in 1930 in the short lived spring upturn seats reached that level.

Hard Hit in Recent Months.

Chicago exchange traders have been particularly hard hit during the last year and a half. Trading has fallen off so drastically that a 15,000 share daily turnover is now considered a fair rate of business. In 1929 a 400,000 share day was considered "fair."

The virtual absence of public participation in the market makes tough sledding for the professional traders who depend on commissions for their livelihood. By "livelihood" brokers mean something different now than in the easy money era.

Draw College Grads.

The stories of easy money and rapid advancement in the security business in the late nineteen twenties drew an increasing number of recruits from each year's college graduating classes. It was not unusual for a youngster one year out of college to be making $100 a week in the brokerage business.

A story is told of one prominent brokerage house that hired a young chap with social connections at an initial salary of $5,000 a year. His duty was to cultivate his social acquaintances with a view of obtaining business for his employers. Today he is employed by the same firm at a salary of $1,250 a year.

While statistics are not available it has been estimated that nearly half the members of graduating classes of certain universities in the year 1928-'29 entered the security business through one channel or another. Bond salesmen were put through a few weeks' training period and sent out to tell people how to invest their money. The young men were extremely susceptible to the new era of business philosophy because they never knew any other. For that reason they were its best salesmen.

Brokers' Forces Curtailed.

Organizations of security distributing houses have cut to the bone in the last two years. The scale of salaries has been revised downward frequently in the last two years.

Younger men are finding their way into other lines of business after spending a few years in the security field. The experiences of the last three years have suggested that the security business may not be the most attractive of all possible lines of endeavor. A few years back it appeared just that to a great number of young men impressed by the prospects of easy money in a white collar profession.
